THE BRIGHTER SIDE

SOME YEARS AGO, they were looking for a new baseball writer for the New York American and we said we had heard excellent reports of one of Otto Floto's bright young men on the sports staff of the Denver Post. So they sent out to Denver and got this bright young man whose name turned out to be Gene Fowler. He was a tall, stringy youth, as he arrived in New York, with a wild gleam in one eye. There was a wilder gleam in the other eye. He was immediately dispatched to Chicago to cover a world series then impending.

Caleb Van Hamm, dead these many moons, was then managing editor of the American, a mild and courteous man. He knew perhaps somewhat vaguely of an addition to the sports staff, but he did not know the addition's name.

Thus he was greatly astonished when he commenced getting telegrams of considerable length, and intense coherency, from somebody in Chicago signing himself Gene.

THE TELEGRAMS related in detail the weather conditions in Chicago, and told of the many fine characters who resided there, with specific reference to prominent bartenders.

The bewildered Mr. Van Hamm tried code ciphers on the telegrams but nothing came of it, and then he took to reading them upside down to see what happened.

Finally with a batch of telegrams in his hand he wandered, greatly confused, about the office, asking others what they made of the missives, and finally somebody in the sports department said they might be from the new baseball writer, a Mr. Fowler. "Call him in at once," said Mr. Van

Many Prizes Awarded In Annual Flower And Vegetable Exposition

More than 750 individual exhibits, products of home gardens of members of rural community clubs of Ouachita parish, were entered in the third annual flower and vegetable show, sponsored by the Monroe Kiwanis club, which closed last night.

The exhibition, held in the study hall of the Ouachita Parish High school, corner Grand and Calypso streets, was voted the best of its kind ever held in the city by the hundreds of persons who visited the show during Friday and Saturday.

Saturday afternoon's opening of the exhibition was featured by a parade of decorated automobiles entered by community and 4-H clubs of the parish. The parade was led by the Ouachita Parish High school band in uniform and equipment of the Monroe

Officers Chafe As 72 Hours Pass Without Further Word

SPLIT-UP OF AUTHORITIES WORKING ON CASE DENIED

State And County Men Move Out Of Federal Agents' Quarters

STONY BROOK, N. Y., June 12.—(AP)—Alarmed by the absence of any overtures for ransom, Long Island police tonight expressed fear that the missing Mrs. Alice McDonnell Parsons had been slain by her abductors.

Inspector Francis X. McGarvey of the state troopers ordered a thorough search of the wooded areas surrounding the registered poultry breeder disappeared Wednesday noon.

Suffolk county authorities, chafing under the passage of 72 hours without any further word from the writer of a $25,000 ransom note found at the scene, asked Scoutmaster Allen Land to muster his troop of 35 boy scouts tomorrow to aid in the search.

An effort was made to cover the ground Thursday with bloodhounds, but a heavy rainfall ruined any chances of picking up a scent.

Lacking any tangible clues, investigators turned their attention on a 36-year-old naturalized Russian woman who had lived on the Parsons' squab farm with her 11-year-old son since 1931.

HOSPITAL'S COST WILL BE DECIDED

Legislators To Be Polled On $8,000,000 Or $12,000,000

BATON ROUGE, La., June 12.—(AP)—Governor Richard Leche said today that the state board of liquidation would poll members of the state legislature for their decision whether to build the New Orleans Charity hospital at a cost of $8,000,000 or at a cost of $12,000,000.

The governor said that it was up to the legislature to decide whether the hospital should "be a very fine hospital or the best in the country perhaps." He said he would not make any recommendation to the legislature but allow its members to come to their own decision.

Originally, plans for the hospital called for an expenditure of $8,000,000. Leche said but higher cost of labor and building materials, together with contemplated increases in the building plans, would bring cost of the structure to $12,000,000.

"It's up to the legislature to decide whether we should just go ahead and build a hospital costing $8,000,000 under the old plans or spend $4,000,000 more for the finest hospital in the world," the legislature's duty to provide the money, my duty is to spend it wisely. As far as I'm concerned

ALTO TO ARCHIBALD ROAD WORK TO OPEN

Construction of the new concrete highway between Alto and Archibald will begin Monday, it was announced Saturday by Wayne Huckaby, of the state highway department. The road will be closed to traffic beginning today, Mr. Huckaby said. Traffic from Monroe to Winnsboro will detour at Alto and go by way of Mangham. Heavy trucks, however, are advised to use the road by way of Rayville, in order to preserve the Alto-Mangham road, which is hard gravel, for the use of lighter traffic.

DRIVE TO POINT WITHIN 3 MILES OF CITY THROUGH BROKEN DEFENSE

Breach Two Miles Wide And Only Line Of Hills Lies Between

REBEL PLANES DUMP TONS OF EXPLOSIVES ON FOES

For Second Day No Government Aircraft Aid Ground Forces

By Edward J. Neil
VITORIA, Spain, June 12.—(AP)—Insurgent troops pounded a breach in the famed Basque "iron ring" around Bilbao today, second day of their headlong drive, and reached a point only slightly more than three miles from the besieged city.

They smashed through the "last ditch" defenses between Cantabriabao and Urusti, directly east of Bilbao, after many hours of artillery and airplane bombardment.

The breach was fully two miles wide. Between the insurgents and Bilbao, menaced for many weeks, lay only a single line of hills. Once they have reached their summit, General Fidel Davila's men hope to rush down the opposite slopes into the Basque capital.

Prisoners taken by the insurgents declared the hills were unfortified; that the advancing force had rolled over the last prepared defenses in that section.

I stood on a ridge which the insurgents took yesterday to watch the battle. At one time there were 27 trimotored insurgent bombers in the sky simultaneously, dropping tons of explosives on the government trenches and command posts.

The defenders put up only weak resistance when Davila's warriors charged their line after a half-day bombardment. Most of them had retreated before the assault started.

For the second day, no government aircraft came to the assistance of the ground forces, and no government artillery replied to the seemingly endless stream of shells which wrecked what had been heralded by the Basques as an impenetrable defense line.

The V-shaped Basque line came to a point at Viaraberria. It was well fortified—but the insurgent attack hit at the weakest spot. Breaking through was easy.

The government soldiers in the America's most glamorous bride of the year is beautiful, fabulously wealthy Ethel du Pont, heiress to a vast chemicals fortune, who on June 30 will be married to Franklin D. Her family's natural athletic bent stands her in good stead for keeping in shape for the strain of the pre-wedding social events, for she plays tennis well. Here she plays with Major, Chesapeake retriever, who has brought her a stray tennis ball.

Go To Deaths For Alleged Service To 'Unfriendly' Power

MOSCOW, June 12.—(AP)—The government announced today that Marshal Mikhail N. Tukhachevsky and seven generals, condemned to death for treason, had been executed.

They died before a firing squad by judgment of the military tribunal of the supreme court, which declared them guilty of serving the military intelligence service of an "unfriendly" foreign power.

That power was unnamed, but unmistakable indications were the leaders of the Soviet union believed it was Germany.

Most of Moscow was convinced they were condemned for a huge plot to strip the Soviet union of its western provinces and give them to Germany.

FOUR INJURED IN HEAD-ON COLLISION

Fred McDaniel, of Downsville, his wife and 7-year-old son and his sister, were slightly injured in an automobile accident which occurred Saturday night on the Monroe-Shreveport highway about three miles west of Monroe.

Mr. McDaniel, who was driving the car in which the others were riding, reported that he crashed head-on with another automobile. The name of the driver of the second car could not be ascertained but it was said that he was not hurt. Mr. McDaniel and his family were treated at Riverside sanitarium and later discharged.

Principals In Bellow Contest Shout Charges

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—Contentious in the coming congressional tussle—Representatives Otha D. Wearin of Iowa and Robert Mouton of Louisiana—shouted charges and counter-charges today.

Wearin—who will defend the mid-western hog call against the old Louisiana Cajan cry of "Eh, la bas!"—said Mouton is keeping pigs in the house of representatives office building.

Mouton—proponent of the bayou bellow—replied that Wearin is trying to get psychological advantage by soliciting the aid of Indians.

"There isn't any use to hate your enemies. I like a good fight; but when it's all over I'm ready to shake hands. And that's what we'll all do at Gettysburg."

But the new adjutant general of the U. C. V., General J. W. Harris of Oklahoma City, feels differently, and there were others who shared his views.

FOUR MEMBERS OF GROUP DISAGREE WITH EXECUTIVE

One Of Notable Differences Of Opinion On Court Reform Bill

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—Six senators assumed tonight the senate's share of a joint congressional investigation of tax dodging.

To the joint committee, Vice-President Garner automatically appointed the six senior members of the senate finance committee, which has charge of tax legislation. They are: Senators Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi; LaFollette, Progressive, Wisconsin; King, Georgia; Walsh, Democrat, Massachusetts; and Capper, Republican, Kansas.

Six house members have still to be named, but leaders said they would be members of the ways and means committee, in which all revenue legislation originates. There was a general expectancy that Chairman Doughton, Democrat, North Carolina, would head the joint committee.

Meanwhile, Senator Loneragan, Democrat, Connecticut, made public an exchange of correspondence with the treasury in which the latter, over the signature of Roswell Magill as acting secretary reiterated its long standing position in favor of a constitutional amendment making the income from federal, state and municipal securities subject to taxation.

The forthcoming inquiry into tax avoidance is in response to a request

Nacelle Sims Saves Brother, Girl Companion From Drowning In River

The prompt action of a 13-year-old girl, Nacelle Sims, probably saved her brother, Leroy Sims, 25, and Castella Ryals, 19, from drowning in the Ouachita river Saturday afternoon, when the skiff in which Sims and Miss Ryals were crossing the river from the West Monroe side, filled with water and capsized.

Nacelle Sims, who was standing on the bank watching the skiff, saw the boat turn over and heard her brother and his companion crying for help. As there was no one in the vicinity at the time, Nacelle jumped into a boat which was moored at the bank and rowed to the rescue of her brother and Miss Ryals who were struggling desperately to keep afloat.

A negro youth, who was attracted by the shouting, turned in an alarm which brought the American Legion emergency truck on the scene manned by Captain J. W. Faler and a crew from the Central fire station. When they arrived, Sims and Miss Ryals were safe on shore.

Sims told the firemen that he was crossing the river about two years

In the household has been variously described as companion and servant.

Federal agents questioned her and her third husband, Alex Kupryanoff, for several hours last night in the Bay Shore barracks of the state police.

Kupryanoff, who was found living in a Brooklyn rooming house, was quoted by Assistant District Attorney Joseph A. Arata as saying he married Mrs. Kupryanova in Europe prior to 1930 and divorced her in 1932. She had not mentioned him in previous accounts of her history, but last night she said he was the father of her son, a statement which he termed impossible. Previously she had said the boy's father was a British economist named Santer whom she had married in England and who was killed in an automobile accident in 1930.

Neither was detained after the questioning, which ended at 4 a.m., although as a matter of convenience the former husband decided to sleep in the police barracks. Mrs. Kupryanova was taken back to the Parsons farm. Investigators said she might be questioned further at some other time.

The woman, known to residents of Stony Brook as "the countess," said she last saw Mrs. Parsons when the 26-year-old heiress drove away with an unidentified man and woman shortly before noon Wednesday.

She thought the couple wanted to be shown some property at nearby Huntington which Mrs. Parsons was trying to rent, she said.

Although officially denied, reports of friction among the various police agencies gathered at the scene gained ground when the state and county officers moved out of the temporary headquarters set up by government men.

The farm, which is about two miles from the village proper, remained clear of police officers, as far as the casual observer could see, at the request of the missing woman's husband, William H. Parsons.

He kept an almost sleepless vigil inside the house, waiting for some word from the kidnappers. He was understood to have the ransom money ready for delivery.

Assistant District Attorney Lindsay Henry declared there were "no clues, and no one is under suspicion."

Mouton, admitting he has the porkers parked somewhere in the legislative structure, explained it was only until he finds a home for them near the capitol.

The pigs are Mouton's bet that he'll out-shout Wearin.

"However," added the debonaire Louisianian, "pigs are nothing. Word has come to me that a group of Indians have given my opponent a shouting degree."

Questioned on this count, the youthful Iowan said he had been taken into the brotherhood by Indians on the Mesquakie reservation at Tama, Ia. He added that he was proud of it.

$6,000,000 SAVED BY TAX EXEMPTIONS

BATON ROUGE, La., June 12.—(AP)—R. C. Childs, assistant in the bureau of business research of the college of commerce of Louisiana State university, estimated today that home owners in the state have saved $6,000,000 in property taxes in the past two years because of homestead exemptions.

Exemptions in 1935 amounted to $2,731,952.28 and 1936 exemptions $3,248,581.12, Childs' compilation showed.

He said approximately 26,000 more home owners will receive exemptions this year than last.

Recently, State Treasurer A. P. Tugwell announced that he expected the amount of exemption would be greater for next year than the $1,000 exemptions allowed for the past two years and this year.

Increased receipts this year will go to make up the deficit caused from paying exemptions up to $1,000 in the preceding years, Tugwell said, but payment of that deficit this year would probably make increased exemptions possible next year.

SECURITY FARMS AT CREW LAKE PLANNED

Information received in Monroe Saturday stated that Representative New V. Mills has announced in Washington that the resettlement administration has informed him that it will start immediate construction of homes to accommodate about 40 families on a farm tenant security project at Crew Lake.

General J. L. Gray, M. T. Olive, commander of the Mississippi division, recalls that the blue and the gray held a joint assembly at Vicksburg "about twenty years ago, maybe longer," which he attended.

"Everybody had the time of their lives. We just talked and jollied with those Yankees, and nobody ever got mad. There was real comradeship; and I see no reason why it can't be that way at Gettysburg."

General Robert Lee Fitzpatrick, chairman of the North Carolina state Confederate pension board, who has "buddied" with some of the "Yankees" while wintering in Florida, said he was looking forward to Gettysburg for "a good time."

"I've talked with a lot of those G. A. R. veterans in Florida, and they're just as fine as they can be. Some of them told me they didn't know what they were fighting about during the Civil war anyway."

VETERAN PREDICTS NEW WORLD WAR

JACKSON, Miss., June 12.—(AP)—"You mark my words, you young fellows might as well get ready to go to war in about two years," was the prophetic observation of General Homer V. Atkinson, Petersburg, Va., retiring commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans.

"What war?" asked a young aide of the feeble old Civil war campaigner. "Another world war. The United States is just as sure to get in another war in Europe as I'm sitting here."

"We are going to keep on having wars as long as we have people. We might as well prepare for it. I'm in favor of the United States joining hands with England, and pooling our armies, navies and air forces. Then we can lick the rest of the world. We've got the best brains, the most money, and the bravest men in the United States of any country in the world, and England is next to us."

"With all this trouble in Europe, we can expect to get drawn in. There isn't any way around it."

"Here in our own country, we're breeding discontent. Folks working 40 hours and getting paid for a week—others living off the government. People without work to do are not satisfied people."

"I tell you, the next war isn't far off."

PRESIDENT'S CHIEF 'NO' MAN LEAVING

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—President Roosevelt will lose the leading "no" man among his close advisors when Vice-President Garner leaves tomorrow for home.

Garner, according to those in a position to know, speaks his mind more freely to the chief executive than almost anyone else in the administration. He has been particularly valuable to the president because of his long congressional experience.

Presidents of the United States, like other big executives, hear "yes" from their associates and advisors more often than "no." It is sometimes difficult for them to get frank opinions from their subordinates.

Among the subjects on which the vice-president has been saying "no" to the president recently, according to those who know, are spending, the president's court bill, and sit-down strikes.

The First Presbyterian church vacation Bible school will open tomorrow at 9 a. m. and will run for two weeks with sessions each week day morning, Saturday excepted. Mrs. W. J. Kirby will act as supervisor and Miss Mary Frances Miller will be the pianist.

Teachers will be Miss Louise Farr, Mrs. Herbert Steed, Miss Catharine Mikel, Miss Catherine Smith, Mrs. Curtis Smith, Mrs. Sid Walker, and Miss Margaret Smith. A bus will run to Lamkin to bring children in to the school.

Classes will be for boys and girls of ages of four to 14 years.

STATE UNIVERSITY TEACHER SUCCEUMBS

BATON ROUGE, La., June 12.—(AP)—Dr. Rodrick Lewis Carleton, 34, who had just been appointed a full professor of government at Louisiana State university, died today.

He succumbed to injuries suffered May 21 in an automobile accident as he was returning home from the university late one night after grading examination papers. Lights of a passing automobile blinded him, causing him to drive his machine into a parked car. Both automobiles were demolished.

The professor had been hovering between life and death since the day of the accident.

Dr. Carleton joined the L. S. U. faculty in 1928 as a fellowship student. The university board of supervisors advanced him as full professor in government from associate professor at the close of the school year.

Born in Washington, D. C., he was graduated from McKendree college at Lebanon, Ill. For five years, he represented the United Fruit company in Panama and Costa Rica, entering L. S. U. upon his return from the tropics in 1928.

Carleton secured a leave of absence from L. S. U. in 1931, to work toward his doctorate at the University of Illinois.

He is survived by his widow, the former Miss Marguerite Parker, one son, his mother and one brother, all of Baton Rouge.

FULL TROOP

In the household has been variously described as companion and servant. Federal agents questioned her and her third husband, Alex Kupryanoff, for several hours last night in the Bay Shore barracks of the state police.

Kupryanoff, who was found living in a Brooklyn rooming house, was quoted by Assistant District Attorney Joseph A. Arata as saying he married Mrs. Kupryanova in Europe prior to 1930 and divorced her in 1933. She had not mentioned him in previous accounts of her history, but last night she said he was the father of her son, a statement which he termed impossible. Previously she had said the boy's father was a British economist named Sanier whom she had married in England and who was killed in an automobile accident in 1930.

Neither was detained after the questioning, which ended at 4 a. m., although as a matter of convenience the former husband decided to sleep in the police barracks. Mrs. Kupryanova was taken back to the Parsons farm. Investigators said she might be questioned further at some other time.

The woman, known to residents of Stony Brook as "the countess," said she last saw Mrs. Parsons when the 66-year-old heiress drove away with an unidentified man and woman shortly before noon Wednesday.

She thought the couple wanted to be shown some property at nearby Huntington which Mrs. Parsons was trying to rent, she said.

Although officially denied, reports of friction among the various police agencies gathered at the scene gained ground when the state and county officers moved out of the temporary headquarters set up by government men.

The farm, which is about two miles from the village proper, remained clear of police officers, as far as the casual observer could see, at the request of the missing woman's husband, William H. Parsons.

He kept an almost sleepless vigil inside the house, waiting for some word from the kidnappers. He was understood to have the ransom money ready for delivery.

Assistant District Attorney Lindsay Henry declared there were "no clues, and no one is under suspicion."

he's keeping them in the house of representatives office building. Is that cricket?"

Mouton, admitting he has the porkers parked somewhere in the legislative structure, explained it was only until he finds a home for them near the capitol.

The pigs are Mouton's bet that he'll out-shout Wearin.

"However," added the debonaire Louisianian, "pigs are nothing. Word has come to me that a group of Indians have given my opponent a shouting degree."

Questioned on this count, the youthful Iowa said he had been taken into the brotherhood by Indians on the Mesquakie reservation at Tama, Ia. He added that he was proud of it.

"There's no degree involved," he said. "They just gave the name—Wa-sho-kon-hu—which means, strong voice. It's an old Mesquakie custom."

$6,000,000 SAVED BY TAX EXEMPTIONS

BATON ROUGE, La., June 12.—(P)—R. C. Childs, assistant in the bureau of business research of the college of commerce of Louisiana State university, estimated today that home owners in the state have saved $6,000,000 in property taxes in the past two years because of homestead exemptions.

Exemptions in 1935 amounted to $2,731,922.25 and 1936 exemptions $3,248,581.12, child's compilation showed.

He said approximately 26,000 more home owners will receive exemptions this year than last.

Recently, State Treasurer A. P. Tugwell announced that he expected the amount of exemption would be greater for next year than the $1,000 exemptions allowed for the past two years and this year.

Increased receipts this year will go to make up the deficit caused from paying exemptions up to $1,000 in the preceding years, Tugwell said, but payment of that deficit this year would probably make increased exemptions possible next year.

SECURITY FARMS AT CREW LAKE PLANNED

Information received in Monroe Saturday stated that Representative Newt V. Mills has announced in Washington that the resettlement administration has informed him that it will start immediate construction of homes to accommodate about 40 families on a farm tenant security project at Crew Lake.

He further stated that the resettlement administration had obtained several hundred acres of cotton land in Richland parish for the project.

true southern gentleman, and if any Yankee says anything that reflects on the honor of the south, then he can get a fight right now. I never have had but two fist fights in my life, but I'm not too old. But I'm not expecting any trouble."

General J. L. Gray, Mt. Olive, commander of the Mississippi division, recalls that the blue and the gray held a joint assembly at Vicksburg "about twenty years ago, maybe longer," which he attended.

"Everybody had the time of their lives. We just talked and jollied with those Yankees, and nobody ever got mad. There was real comradeship; and I see no reason why it can't be that way at Gettysburg."

General Robert Lee Fitzpatrick, chairman of the North Carolina state Confederate pension board, who has "buddied" with some of the "Yankees" while wintering in Florida, said he was looking forward to Gettysburg for "a good time."

"I've talked with a lot of those G. A. R. veterans in Florida, and they're just as fine as they can be. Some of them told me they didn't know what they were fighting about during the Civil war anyway."

VETERAN PREDICTS NEW WORLD WAR

JACKSON, Miss., June 12.—(P)—"You mark my words, you young fellows might get ready to go to war in about two years," was the prophetic observation of General Homer V. Atkinson, Petersburg, Va., retiring commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans.

"What war?" asked a young aide of the feeble old Civil war campaigner.

"Another world war. The United States is just as sure to get in another war in Europe as I'm sitting here."

"We are going to keep on having wars as long as we have people. We might as well prepare for it. I'm in favor of the United States joining hands with England, and pooling our armies, navies and air forces. Then we can lick the rest of the world. We've got the best brains, the most money, and the bravest men in the United States of any country in the world, and England is next to us.

"With all this trouble in Europe, we can expect to get drawn in. There isn't any way around it.

"Here in our own country, we're breeding discontent. Folks working 40 hours and getting paid for a week—others living off the government. People without work to do are not satisfied people.

"I tell you, the next war isn't far off."

PRESIDENT'S CHIEF 'NO' MAN LEAVING

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(P)—President Roosevelt will lose the leading "no" man among his close advisors when Vice-President Garner leaves tomorrow for home.

Garner, according to those in a position to know, speaks his mind more freely to the chief executive than almost anyone else in the administration. He has been particularly valuable to the president because of his long congressional experience.

Presidents of the United States, like other big executives, hear "yes" from their associates, and advisors more often than "no." It is sometimes difficult for them to get frank opinions from their subordinates.

Among the subjects on which the vice-president has been saying "no" to the president recently, according to those who know, are spending, the president's court bill, and sit-down strikes.

PRESBYTERIANS TO OPEN BIBLE SCHOOL

The First Presbyterian church vacation Bible school will open tomorrow at 9 a. m. and will run for two weeks with sessions each week day morning, Saturday excepted. Mrs. W. J. Kirby will act as supervisor and Miss Mary Frances Miller will be the pianist.

Teachers will be Miss Louise Farr, Mrs. Herbert Steed, Miss Catharine Mikel, Miss Catherine Smith, Mrs. Curtis Smith, Mrs. Sid Walker, and Miss Margaret Smith. A bus will run to Lamkin to bring children in to the school.

Classes will be for boys and girls of ages four to 14 years.

STUDENTS FROM MONROE TO PLAY IN L. S. U. BAND

BATON ROUGE, La., June 12.—(Special)—Auditions for new members of the Louisiana State university band, which is to consist of 250 pieces next year, are now being conducted by Colonel Castro Carazo, director, in the new band hall located on the university campus. The band comprises three units, the concert band, the drum and bugle corps and the cadet band. There were 205 men in the band last year.

Among the band members already accepted for next year are two from Monroe. They are Robert E. Gangstad, who will play with the cadet band, and Marshall R. Nason, who will play with the concert band.

FRENCH ASTHMA FORMULA

Liberal Supply FREE

During the World War, the development by a French chemist of a formula for overcoming the distress caused by the spasms and paroxysms of asthma, brought such amazing results that its fame quickly spread all over Europe. Now introduced in the United States as the Bel-Din Treatment. This amazing preparation acts to overcome gasping, choking and the feeling of suffocation that accompanies asthma. The Bel-Din Company, Dept. 264, Montrose, California, are anxious for every sufferer to try this treatment. They will send a liberal free supply to anyone who writes them. Do it today. (Adv.)

STATE UNIVERSITY TEACHER SUCCUMBS

BATON ROUGE, La., June 12.—(P)—Dr. Rodrick Lewis Carleton, 34, who had just been appointed a full professor of government at Louisiana State university, died today.

He succumbed to injuries suffered May 21 in an automobile accident as he was returning home from the university late one night after grading examination papers. Lights of a passing automobile blinded him, causing him to drive his machine into a parked car. Both automobiles were demolished.

The professor had been hovering between life and death since the day of the accident.

Dr. Carleton joined the L. S. U. faculty in 1928 as a fellowship student. The university board of supervisors advanced him as full professor in government from associate professor at the close of the school year.

Born in Washington, D. C., he was graduated from McKendree college at Lebanon, Ill. For five years, he represented the United Fruit company in Panama and Costa Rica, entering L. S. U. upon his return from the tropics in 1926.

Carleton secured a leave of absence from L. S. U. in 1931, to work toward his doctorate at the University of Illinois.

He is survived by his widow, the former Miss Marguerite Parker, one son, his mother and one brother, all of Baton Rouge.

Funeral services will be held here tomorrow afternoon and his body will be taken to Memphis, Tenn., for cremation.

FILL THE TANK ONCE and drive all day!

FORD "60" OWNERS REPORT 22-27 MILES PER GALLON

FIRST built for England and France, where fuel costs are high, the 60-horsepower Ford V-8 is writing even more remarkable mileage records on American roads. Private owners and fleet operators alike report averages of from 22 to 27 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

You can fill the tank of your Ford "60" and drive all day, if you like—300 to 400 miles—without stopping again for fuel. Besides costing less to run than any other Ford car ever built, it sells at the lowest Ford price in years. That's double economy!

The "60" delivers V-8 smoothness and quiet at speeds up to 70 miles an hour and its famous older brother, the "85," gives top performance and greater gasoline mileage this year than ever.

Both engine sizes are built into the same roomy car, of the same advanced design, with the same modern features of comfort and dependability that make the 1937 Ford V-8 unquestionably THE QUALITY CAR IN THE LOW-PRICE FIELD.

Ford V-8 "60"

FORD V-8 $529 at Dearborn Factory. PRICES BEGIN AT Transportation charges, State and Federal taxes extra

This price is for the 60-horsepower Coupe, illustrated above, equipped with front and rear bumpers, spare tire, horn, windshield wiper, sun visor, glove compartment, and ash tray.

Honor For Self's Sake

"There is a generation," says Solomon, "that curseth their father, and doth not bless their mother."

A well-known contemporary author created a best seller minutely describing what a rotter his father was and what a termagant his mother. One man after reading the book dashed it to the floor in disgust. "I haven't common respect for such a person," he said, referring to the author. "He has deliberately made capital of the weaknesses of his father and the shortcomings of his mother. He is not fit for the recognition of decent people."

Many a person could have produced or could produce an entertaining narrative by exposing the flaws of his father and the faults of his mother, but probably considered—and rightly—that the end would not justify the means.

The biblical command to honor thy father and mother is not given only for the benefit of the father and mother. All the honor that can be shown them by their children will not improve their chances in the hereafter. The respectful consideration of their children will, of course, make their lot here on earth pleasant, but that is not the prime purpose of the divine command. The underlying reason for the admonition, "Honor thy father and thy mother," is for the benefit of those to whom the command is addressed.

The command, "Thou shalt not steal," is not so much for the good of the one whose possessions would be misappropriated as for the one who would do the misappropriating. If one steals from a person he has not basically injured that person—he has merely inconvenienced him. The victim's soul is just as well off as it was before the theft; but the thief's soul is not. The person who has been stolen from has lost a material possession worth nothing in the long run; for he must part with it eventually anyway. But the one who has done the stealing has harmed himself spiritually; he has impaired his character; he has injured his real self—the only thing he can take with him when he leaves this world.

Probably none of the commands concerning our behavior toward others is intended so much for the benefit of others as for ourselves—for the development and improvement of our own characters. The assumption is borne out by the fact that no matter what others may do to us, no matter how they may mistreat us they cannot fundamentally harm us if we maintain the right attitude toward them and toward life. So the commands to be just and merciful and to walk humbly are not so much for the good of others as for the good of those who obey them.

Thus the command to honor thy father and thy mother—a command frequently regarded as outmoded—is for the benefit of the children themselves. Therefore, obedience to that command should be demanded of children as part of the parental discipline necessary in bringing up a child in the way it should go.

MISSED THE BOAT?

Ramsay MacDonald, one-time labor premier of England, and more recently lord president of the council in the Baldwin cabinet, retired from public life almost unnoticed the other day, submitting his resignation along with Mr. Baldwin.

As MacDonald's public career closes, it is hard to avoid the feeling that this man missed the boat, somewhere along the way. His advent to the prime ministership was greeted with high hopes; here was a Labor party man, a pacifist, a man who had intimately known poverty and hardship, at the helm of the British empire. Would not great things result from it?

Well—the great things somehow did not result. "Ramsay Mac" was sobered by responsibility—too much sobered, perhaps. His service to the empire was distinguished and useful; yet it lacked that indefinable little bit more—which, somehow, we felt we had a right to expect from him—that makes the difference between distinguished service and true greatness.

TOWARD STATE TARIFFS

While all this discussion of the Constitution is going on, it might be a good idea to dust off that old constitutional provision which prohibits the erection of any tariff barriers between the states.

No state has yet set up an actual tariff, but the recent tendency has certainly been in that direction. Divers western states now have "ports of entry" for all truck traffic, and getting through them is very much like getting through customs in a foreign port. Now we find California charging sellers of non-California-made beer $500 for a license, while sellers of beer made in California pay only $50; and in retaliation Missouri prohibits the importation of alcoholic beverages from any state which discriminates against the sale of Missouri-made beer.

These things aren't tariffs, of course—but they are uncomfortably like tariffs in their effect. American prosperity could never survive a network of state-line trade barriers.

An old timer is one who can remember when Fourth of July firecrackers killed as many celebrators as automobiles now do in an off day.

Across the Hills of Normandie

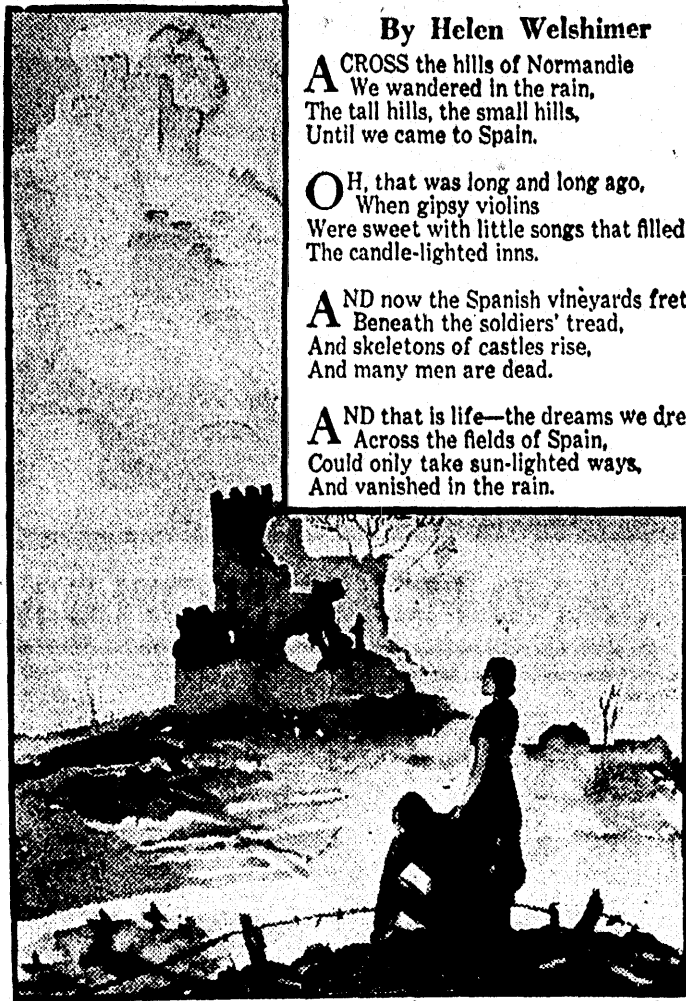

By Helen Welshimer

ACROSS the hills of Normandie
We wandered in the rain,
The tall hills, the small hills,
Until we came to Spain.

O H, that was long and long ago,
When gipsy violins
Were sweet with little songs that filled
The candle-lighted inns.

AND now the Spanish vineyards fret
Beneath the soldiers' tread,
And skeletons of castles rise,
And many men are dead.

AND that is life—the dreams we dreamed
Across the fields of Spain,
Could only take sun-lighted ways,
And vanished in the rain.

A BOOK REVIEW

HANSUN CLOSES EPIC CYCLE OF NOVELS

After many years of writing, Knut Hamsun has, in the words of his publishers, "completed the last variation on the central theme which has run through all his books." The completed novels now form a sort of epic of mature thought and feeling.

As in all his previous novels, "The Ring Is Closed" finds Mr. Hamsun writing of himself. We see him now, at 70, gazing at his universe from a darkening point.

"The Ring Is Closed" takes us again to the little Norwegian coast village which has appeared in so many of Hamsun's works. Abel, the writer's alter ego, is a happy-go-lucky wanderer, whose inner fineness and tolerance at once fits him into and reconciles him with life as he finds it. He wanders about the world, living precariously, outwardly free; yet his rootlessness is disturbing and he must return again home. He is the complete individualist whose only hope lies within himself.

The women in Abel's life are stirring and vital. There is Olga, Abel's youthful sweetheart, whose obsession with the outward trappings of daily life conceals her deep love for him, even from herself. Then there is Lola, devoted and efficient, whose self-sacrifice knows no bounds, whose patience is undying.

Hamsun says of his book, "The Ring Is Closed," as for both thought and imagination, is the best thing I have done." There is little more to be said. It is a fine, stirring and, I believe, enduring work of art.—E. M. T.

RHYME AND REASON

By ANNE CAMPBELL

WHEN YOU ARE TWENTY-ONE

When you are twenty-one, I know
That I will want to look
At the revealing words that glow
In your blue baby book.

I will go back through precious years,
When we walked hand in hand,
And if I should be close to tears,
You would not understand.

All the mistakes that I have made,
The tasks I left undone,
Upon my heart will cast a shade
When you are twenty-one.

If there is not the same warm bond
Of far-off baby days,
I am a failure! Will a fond
Smile blossom in your gaze?

When you are twenty-one, the gauge
Of my success will show
In the well-written youthful page
Of your maturity!

SO THEY SAY

Russia has been a fascinating experience. They are doing extraordinary things. Naturally, European experience causes one to be deeply grateful for our own system of government.—Joseph E. Davies, ambassador to the U. S. S. R.

Business men who represent the vigor and vitality of private initiative cannot remain provincial in their political and social outlook.—Salvador de Madariaga, Spanish statesman.

To live happily, when retired, we must develop earlier in life an avocation, to maintain our interest in life.—Dr. Charles H. Mayo.

Vindictiveness and denunciation are indicative of a weakness in argument.—U. S. Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Arkansas.

If there is anything that this country needs today, it is individual responsibility.—Alfred E. Smith.

BARBS

A New Bern, N. C., man was a father at 94, again at 96, and was dead at 97, suggesting that prosperity and depression do run in cycles.

Noise of a plane in flight is mostly from propellers beating the air, just like a mosquito getting ready to make a landing.

Anyone doubting that the government has gone in for building may be convinced by a glance at its tax structure.

Russia, executing 44 more as spies, seems determined to offset its recent birth rate increase.

TODAY'S BIBLE THOUGHT

The Lord shall judge the people: judge me, O Lord, according to my righteousness, and according to mine integrity that is in me.—Psalms 7:8.

THUNDERBOLT FROM OLYMPUS

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON—The fight for control between Roosevelt and congress has now reached the point where the president speaks privately of a "purge" of anti-New Dealers from the Democratic party and where his chief opponents in the senate hope to humble him as Woodrow Wilson was humbled in the League of Nations fight.

There is cockiness and grimness on each side. The closer you get to the White House the more you get the impression that the supreme court plan is far from being a dead duck and that Roosevelt will press it as the issue on which he will stake the fight for domination of his party and congressional legislation. His bitterest opponents welcome such news and many of his friends do not. Majority opinion in Washington holds that the court plan is likely.

In essence, the prime issue comes close to being a question of whether the people elected members of congress to do what Roosevelt tells them to do or to use their own judgment. An increasing number of members has begun to chant: "Are we nice or are we men?" Ever since election Roosevelt has felt that his huge majority was a personal victory for him and his principles as expressed in the Madison Square Garden speech, that the people who elected Democratic senators and representatives expected them to vote for his measures, that the people continued to stand with him and that as long as he was their voice and instrument, individual senators could not stand against him.

"Party Loyalty" Test

Facing now what is mainly a conservative effort to reduce his power, Roosevelt tells friends the court fight is a good one in which to separate sheep from goats, that the Democratic party would be better off without some of the senators who oppose him and that he is ready to campaign against some of those senators in the primaries next year.

At this writing the president and his aides plan to force the issue by getting a vote on the court plan in both house and senate before the present session ends. They might change their minds, but they've been arguing whether to bring out on the house floor the original bill or a measure modified so as to give the president five supreme court appointments instead of six. The court's final three decisions as to whether favoring companies as against the New Deal were a signal for renewed administration propaganda against the conservative justices.

Many old-timers believe Roosevelt's self-assurance before and after launching the court bill without consulting any one in congress has been conspicuous in a program of tactical blunders. It's too early to tell.

Congressional Annoyance

But the president's attitude is annoying a large section of congress. The senate has several men who want the president defeated because they are aspiring to succeed him, others who don't like the court plan and believe a vote for it is politically dangerous, some who harbor personal grudges as a result of White House snubs, and other jealous of Roosevelt's prestige as compared with their own lack of power. With these men Roosevelt's attitude that most of congress rode in on his coat-tails is not popular at all. They see F. D. R. as a would-be dictator over the Democratic party and its future—and can think of no reason why they should cooperate.

Any on the sidelines are many who compare Roosevelt's self-assurance with that shown by Wilson when he returned from Europe.

Rebellion in the house can be somewhat discounted as a possible menace to Roosevelt since leaders put out what looked like a disastrous fire started in earmarking amendments to the relief bill. Causes of the trouble still remain, however.

Even House Resentful

Many representatives feel they have been treated more or less like pawns by the administration. Few have any contact with the president. Most of them complain that patronage in their districts has been given to senators. The occasional congressman who gets sore and targets into the White House is likely to meet up with a 15-minute presidential sibilator at the end of which Secretary McIntyre comes in and says time's up.

Big city congressmen wanted public works money and many southern members had received promises of school houses and other small buildings from PWA. So when lobbyists and building interests and the building trades unions came along, the house was ripe to rebel and rampage. Leaders would have had a harder time getting it back under control again if mayors hadn't wired angrily to members and persuaded many business men to do likewise by assuring them that cuts in PWA funds meant boosts in local property taxes.

It's much too early to say that Roosevelt hasn't a problem in the house as well as in the senate.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY
By O. O. MCINTYRE

From Raymond G. Carroll, whom Irving Cobb called one of America's finest reporters: "You simply will not allow us of the old regime to be forgotten. And you work alone with a fertility that seems to be increasing with results that are prodigious. I was talking the other day with Jay Jerome Williams, one of your devoted fans, about the astonishing productive power you possess. It occurred to us the new generation is weakening. It has to double up in writing. We have teams on all sides. Looking ahead, I would say this decade will give us threesomes and foursomes doing columns and pieces for the papers and periodicals. There are very few rugged Old Boys left who stick to themselves and do it all alone."

"The reason I liked the Paris that you and I used to prowl about was because it has been the world's tryout laboratory for everything. The Eiffel tower, which was the first skyscraper, to its creator, Alexander Eiffel, was only a steel bridge stood on one end. Paris gave us the first apartment house because the French are a saving race and pooling households was right up their economic street. Charles Teller invented overseas refrigeration, but the French government would not let his frozen beef cargoes from Argentina unload in France and interfere with home dressed beef."

"But what I started out to tell was the legend of Eugene Scribe, writer and dramatist and patron saint of the American troupe. Rue Scribe. He was a silver spoon boy, son of a rich silk maker who decided to go into literature. He wrote and wrote but everything was a flop. He did not have the stuff. So he decided upon collaboration. He had a method of collaboration that is a model for the world. So he took what he thought would make a complete whole. One man to supply the story, another to prepare the dialogue, another to supply the jokes, etc. He paid them all well and turned out good stories. He supplied the book for the operas of Aubert and Myerbeer. So you see, even this sort of doubling up came from Paris."

From Mesmore Kendall in Palm Beach: "I wonder if you have heard the story they are telling on Harry Oakes, the Canadian multi-millionaire mining man, who owns the fabulous Lake Shore mines. Oakes was persuaded by some art dealer that a man of his position ought to have a valuable Old Master and he told Oakes a Rembrandt for $185,000. It was a very fine picture and probably worth the money, if any picture is. Sometime after this a friend met Oakes in London and Oakes remarked 'I have just bought a Rembrandt for $10,000,' and offered to take the friend to see it. He saw it and said: 'Why, that's worth nothing, not interesting and why did you buy it?' 'Well,' Oakes replied, 'I paid $185,000 for a Rembrandt and it has always seemed too high. I bought this one to average down.'"

From T. R. Hyde, Del Monte cafe, Shanghai, China: "Having been a constant reader of your column in the San Francisco Examiner ever here for years, I thought you'd be interested in a letter on the first direct air mail between Shanghai and the U. S. A. It leaves here on a big Sikorsky plane to Hong Kong and connects there with the clipper to Alameda, Calif. Our mutual friend, Tommy Millard, sends best wishes."

The symptoms associated with high blood pressure vary a good deal with the different stages of the condition. Eventually the high blood pressure will bring about changes in various organs of the body, particularly the kidneys, the heart and the brain.

Among the most common symptoms are dizziness, headache, pain over the heart, and symptoms affecting the nervous system.

Because people may neglect measurement of their blood pressure until some occasion demands it, the medical profession has been trying for a long time to get them to go to their doctors at least once each year for a complete physical examination.

Because people are inclined to be sentimental in association with birthdays, it has been suggested that the examination take place each year on the birthday.

Honor For Self's Sake

"There is a generation," says Solomon, "that curseth their father, and doth not bless their mother."

A well-known contemporary author created a best seller minutely describing what a rotter his father was and what a tergite his mother. One man after reading the book dashed it to the floor in disgust. "I haven't common respect for such a person," he said, referring to the author. "He has deliberately made capital of the weaknesses of his father and the shortcomings of his mother. He is not fit for the recognition of decent people."

Many a person could have produced or could produce an entertaining narrative by exposing the flaws of his father and the faults of his mother, but probably considered—and rightly—that the end would not justify the means.

The biblical command to honor thy father and mother is not given only for the benefit of the father and mother. All the honor that can be shown them by their children will not improve their chances in the hereafter. The respectful consideration of their children will, of course, make their lot here on earth pleasanter, but that is not the prime purpose of the divine command. The underlying reason for the admonition, "Honor thy father and thy mother," is for the benefit of those to whom the command is addressed.

The command, "Thou shalt not steal," is not so much for the good of the one whose possessions would be misappropriated as for the one who would do the misappropriating. If one steals from a person he has not basically injured that person—he has merely inconvenienced him. The victim's soul is just as well off as it was before the theft; but the thief's soul is not. The person who has been stolen from has lost a material possession worth nothing in the long run; for he must part with it eventually anyway. But the one who has done the stealing has harmed himself spiritually; he has impaired his character; he has injured his real self—the only thing he can take with him when he leaves this world.

Probably none of the commands concerning our behavior toward others is intended so much for the benefit of others as for ourselves—for the development and improvement of our own characters. The assumption is borne out by the fact that no matter what others may do to us, no matter how they may mistreat us they cannot fundamentally harm us if we maintain the right attitude toward them and toward life. So the commands to be just and merciful and to walk humbly are not so much for the good of others as for the good of those who obey them.

Thus the command to honor thy father and thy mother—a command frequently regarded as outmoded—is for the benefit of the children themselves. Therefore, obedience to that command should be demanded of children as part of the parental discipline necessary in bringing up a child in the way it should go.

MISSED THE BOAT?

Ramsay MacDonald, one-time labor premier of England, and more recently lord president of the council in the Baldwin cabinet, retired from public life almost unnoticed the other day, submitting his resignation along with Mr. Baldwin.

As MacDonald's public career closes, it is hard to avoid the feeling that this man missed the boat, somewhere along the way. His advent to the prime ministership was greeted with high hopes; here was a Labor party man, a pacifist, a man who had intimately known poverty and hardship, at the helm of the British empire. Would not great things result from it?

Well—the great things somehow did not result. "Ramsay Mac" was sobered by responsibility—too much sobered, perhaps. His service to the empire was distinguished and useful; yet it lacked that indefinable little bit more—which, somehow, we felt we had a right to expect from him—that makes the difference between distinguished service and true greatness.

TOWARD STATE TARIFFS

While all this discussion of the Constitution is going on, it might be a good idea to dust off that old constitutional provision which prohibits the erection of any tariff barriers between the states.

No state has yet set up an actual tariff, but the recent tendency has certainly been in that direction. Divers western states now have "ports of entry" for all truck traffic, and getting through them is very much like getting through customs in a foreign port. Now we find California charging sellers of non-California-made beer $500 for a license, while sellers of beer made in California pay only $50; and in retaliation Missouri prohibits the importation of alcoholic beverages from any state which discriminates against the sale of Missouri-made beer.

These things aren't tariffs, of course—but they are uncomfortably like tariffs in their effect. American prosperity could never survive a network of state-line trade barriers.

An old timer is one who can remember when Fourth of July firecrackers killed as many celebrators as automobiles now do in an off day.

Across the Hills of Normandie

By Helen Welshimer

ACROSS the hills of Normandie
We wandered in the rain,
The tall hills, the small hills,
Until we came to Spain.

OH, that was long and long ago,
When gipsy violins
Were sweet with little songs that filled
The candle-lighted inns.

AND now the Spanish vineyards fret
Beneath the soldiers' tread,
And skeletons of castles rise,
And many men are dead.

AND that is life—the dreams we dreamed
Across the fields of Spain,
Could only take sun-lighted ways,
And vanished in the rain.

A BOOK REVIEW

HAMSON CLOSES EPIC CYCLE OF NOVELS

After many years of writing, Knut Hamsun has, in the words of his publishers, "completed the last variation on the central theme which has run through all his books." The completed novels now form a sort of epic of mature thought and feeling.

As in all his previous novels, "The Ring Is Closed" finds Mr. Hamsun writing of himself. We see him now, at 70, gazing at his universe from a darkening point.

"The Ring Is Closed" takes us again to the little Norwegian coast village which has appeared in so many of Hamsun's works. Abel, the writer's alter ego, is a happy-go-lucky wanderer, whose inner fineness and tolerance at once fits him into and reconciles him with life as he finds it. He wanders about the world, living precariously, outwardly free; yet his rootlessness is disturbing and he must return again home. Here is the complete individual who whose only hope lies within himself.

The women in Abel's life are stirring and vital. There is Olga, Abel's youthful sweetheart, whose obsession with the outward trappings of daily life conceals her deep love for him, even from herself. Then there is Lola, devoted and efficient, whose self-sacrifice knows no bounds, whose patience is undying.

Hamsun says of his book, "The Ring Is Closed," as for both thought and imagination, is the best thing I have done." There is little more to be said. It is a fine, stirring and, I believe, enduring work of art.—E. M. T.

RHYME AND REASON

By ANNE CAMPBELL

WHEN YOU ARE TWENTY-ONE

When you are twenty-one, I know
That I will want to look
At the revealing words that glow
In your blue baby book.

I will go back through precious years,
When we walked hand in hand,
And if I should be close to tears,
You would not understand.

All the mistakes that I have made,
The tasks I left undone,
Upon my heart will cast a shade
When you are twenty-one.

If there is not the same warm bond
Of far-off baby days,
I am a failure! Will a fond
Smile blossom in your gaze?

When you are twenty-one, the gauge
Of my success will be
In the well-written youthful page
Of your maturity!

THUNDERBOLT FROM OLYMPUS

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. MCINTYRE

From Raymond G. Carroll, whom Irvin Cobb called one of America's finest reporters: "You simply will not allow us of the old 19th century ballads. And you work alone with a fertility that seems to be increasing with results that are prodigious."

"I was talking the other day with Jay Jerome Williams, one of your devoted fans, about the astonishing productive power you possess. It occurred to us the new generation is weakening. It has to double up in writing. We have teams on all sides. Looking ahead, I would say this decade will give us threesomes and foursomes doing columns and pieces for the papers and periodicals. There are very few rugged Old Boys left who stick to themselves and do it all alone."

"The reason I liked the Paris that you and I used to prowling about was because it has been the world's tryout laboratory for everything. The Eiffel tower, which was the first skyscraper, to its creator, Alexander Eiffel, was only a steel bridge stood on one end. Paris gave us the first apartment house because the French are a saving race and pooling households was right up their economic street. Charles Teller invented overseas refrigeration, but the French government would not let his frozen beef cargoes from Argentina unload in France and interfere with home dressed beef."

"But what I started out to tell was the legend of Eugene Scribe, writer and dramatist and patron saint of the American trot Rue Scribe. He was a silver spoon boy, son of a rich silk maker who decided to go into literature. He wrote and wrote but everything was a flop. He did not have the stuff. So he decided upon collaboration. He had a method of collaboration that is a model for the world. So he took what he thought would make a complete whole. One man to supply the story, another to prepare the dialogue, another to supply the jokes, etc. He paid them all well and turned out good stories. From a lady in Brooklyn: "One of the increasing barriers to comfortable living in America is the problem of domestic help. Girls these days want to go into factories, shops or such. BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON—The fight for control between Roosevelt and congress has now reached the point where the president speaks privately of a "purge" of anti-New Dealers from the Democratic party and where his chief opponents in the senate hope to humble him as Woodrow Wilson was humbled in the League of Nations fight.

There is cockiness and grimness on each side.

The easier you get to the White House the more you get the impression that the supreme court plan is far from being a dead duck and that Roosevelt will press it as the issue on which he will stake the fight for domination of his party and congressional legislation. His bitterest opponents welcome such news and many of his friends do not. Majority opinion in Washington holds that the court plan is licked.

In essence the prime issue comes close to being a question of whether the people elected members of congress to do what Roosevelt tells them to do or to use their own judgment. An increasing number of members has begun to chant: "Are we mice or are we men?" Ever since election Roosevelt has felt that his huge majority was a personal victory for him and his principles as expressed in the Madison Square Garden speech, that the people who elected Democratic senators and representatives expected them to vote for his measures, that the people continued to stand with him and that as long as he was their voice and instrument, individual senators could not stand against him.

"Party Loyalty" Test

Facing now what is mainly a conservative effort to reduce his power, Roosevelt tells friends the court fight is a good one in which to separate sheep from goats, that the Democratic party would be better off without some of the senators who oppose him and that he is ready to campaign against some of those senators in the primaries next year.

At this writing the president and his aides plan to force the issue by getting a vote on the court plan in both house and senate before the present session ends. They might change their minds, but they've been arguing whether to bring out on the house floor the original bill or a measure modified so as to give the president five supreme court appointments instead of six. The court's final three decisions favoring power companies as against the New Deal were a signal for renewed administration propaganda against the conservative justices.

Many old-timers believe Roosevelt's self-assurance before and after launching the court bill without consulting any one in congress has been conspicuous in a program of tactical blunders. It's too early to tell.

Congressional Annoyance

But the president's attitude is annoying a large section of congress. The senate has several men who want the president defeated because they are aspiring to succeed him, others who don't like the court plan and believe a vote for it is politically dangerous, some who harbor personal grudges as a result of White House snubs, and other jealous of Roosevelt's prestige as compared with their own lack of power. With these men Roosevelt's attitude that most of congress rode in on his coat-tails is not popular at all. They see F. D. R. as a victor over the Democratic party and its future—and can think of no reason why they should cooperate.

And on the sidelines are many who compare Roosevelt's self-assurance with that shown by Wilson when he returned from Europe.

Rebellion in the house can be somewhat discounted as a possible menace to Roosevelt since leaders put out who looked like a disastrous fire started in earmarking amendments to the relief bill. Causes of the trouble still remain, however.

Even House Resentful

Many representatives feel they have been treated more or less like pawns by the administration. Few have any contact with the president. Most of them complain that patronage in their districts has been given to senators. The occasional congressman who gets sore and barges into the White House is likely to meet up with a 15-minute presidential filibuster at the end of which Secretary McIntyre comes in and says time's up.

Big city congressmen wanted public works money and many southern members had received promises of school houses and other small buildings from F.W.A. So when lobbyists for the contractors the steel, lumber and building material interests and the building trades unions came along, the house was ripe to rebel and rampage. Leaders would have had a hard time getting it back under control again if mayors hadn't wired angrily to members and persuaded many business men to do likewise by assuring them that cuts in F.W.A. funds meant boosts in local property taxes.

It's much too early to say that Roosevelt hasn't a problem in the house as well as in the senate.

COTTON PICTURE WILL BE SHOWN

Film Will Be Exhibited At Perryville, Monday, And Bosco, Tuesday

"Co-op Cotton Moves to Market," a film strip with sound accompaniment, which shows graphically the varied steps through which a bale of cotton goes in its journey from the cotton fields to the spinning mills, will be shown to members of the Louisiana Cotton Cooperative association at meetings to be held at the American Legion hall near Perryville Monday at 8:15 p.m., and at Bosco, Tuesday at the same hour.

Mark W. Stroud, local representative of the association, will preside at the meetings and will discuss with the members methods by which the cotton cooperatives can better serve the members and the community in marketing the cotton crop.

The film, which was prepared by the Farm Credit administration with the assistance of the American Cotton Cooperative association and the state cotton cooperatives, depicts the workings of the organizations the farmers have set up to market their cotton. Warehousing, transportation, ginning, financing and classing are all explained both by pictures and words.

The film has been shown at other cotton-growing communities in the south, and has aroused much interest, both among cooperative members and among cotton farmers generally.

Father Vandegaer Will Be Honored By Local Church

Venerable Priest Rounds Out 25 Years Of Service In Monroe

FATHER VANDEGAER

Ranking among the oldest priests in length of continuous service as pastor of a Catholic church in Louisiana, and by far the oldest in service as head of any church congregation in Monroe, Father N. F. Vandegaer, pastor of St. Matthew's Catholic church will tomorrow have rounded out 25 years in his present capacity. In recognition of his unusual service rendered, a "silver jubilee" has been arranged by Father M. F. Walsh, assistant pastor.

On Thursday at 9:30 a.m., there will be a special mass to commemorate the occasion. Father Vandegaer will be the celebrant; Father J. C. Marsh, of Hodge, deacon; Father J. C. Vandegaer, of Tallulah, sub-deacon; Father Plutz, of Lake Providence, will preach the sermon, and Father Walsh will be master-of-ceremonies. Following the mass, a dinner will be served at the rectory as an additional honor to Father Vandegaer. It is expected that the mass and dinner will be attended by priests from all parts of the state.

Deeply devoted to every detail that concerns his church and city, Father Vandegaer has for years exerted a strong influence in ecclesiastical and civic affairs. His one purpose has been the advancement of the church in the broadest manner possible. His vision, constructive spirit and desire to help fellow man, no matter at what personal sacrifice might be entailed, have made him beloved throughout Monroe and its entire section of the state.

His substantial family background reaches back to Belgium where his father, Daniel Vandegaer, was born, and who at 10 years of age was brought by his parents to Louisiana to live. Father Vandegaer was born in Many, La., December 27, 1816, and was one of a large family. His mother died when he was five years old. For years his father ranked as one of the substantial citizens of Many, serving for years as parish surveyor.

Father Vandegaer attended the schools of Many, later attending St. Joseph's college, Covington, and later still he pursued his theological studies at Grand Seminary, Montreal, Canada. He was ordained to the priesthood at Natchitoches, June 26, 1902. He came to Monroe and served as assistant pastor at St. Matthew's for four months. Then he was a priest at Vidalia for four years, and at Cloutierville, La., for six years.

June 14, 1912, he came to Monroe to become pastor. Under his faithful ministry, he has seen both city and church make remarkable strides. The congregation was about to occupy the present church edifice at that time but the tower, clock and other later interior improvements were still lacking. The parochial school then had 160 enrolled. Today there are nearly 400. It then occupied some frame shack-like structures on Jackson street. Today it is housed in a Grammont street building that cost equipped, $75,000.

The foundation of the present St. Francis sanitarium was completed, but the structure had yet to be erected. Today the institution in charge of the Catholic Sisters of St. Francis, is a completely equipped "Class A" hospital with 200 beds, admitting patients of all creeds and denominations and the gentle ministrations of the good Sisters, together with the efficient medical staff, has inspired among its patients the strongest sentiments of gratitude and affection regardless of religious affiliation.

In the onward march of progress of Monroe, the Catholic church has played a large and important role, having its origin in the latter part of the 18th century. The first priest to remain for any length of time, was Father Louis Gergaud, who was here 18 years. In 1856, this French priest was appointed "pastor of the missions of Ouchita." Much of the early history of the city is best obtained through a study of the history of this church as its members left an indelible stamp on the community of which they were invariably the most prominent citizens.

Coming to a church with such a brilliant and distinctive past, Father Vandegaer measured up well to the standards set by his predecessors, ever proving faithful to his trust and distinguished by ability to carry on quietly, unobtrusively but with unswerving purpose.

When asked as to his reaction in regard to his life work, he replied the other day that he had no regrets whatever in that he had chosen the priesthood and that his supreme purpose in life has been to secure an appreciative and helpful understanding of the problems of his fellow-man, with the aim of assisting them toward the higher things of life.

With the growth of the church membership from 800, the number 25 years ago, to 2,000 at present, one of the chief needs of the church is for a larger edifice. A new rectory also is badly needed. Father Vandegaer hopes that the way may be opened up for the making of these improvements. Through the years, Father Vandegaer has been so devoted to his congregation that he has taken few vacations. He did, however, take one trip abroad in 1923 when he visited Belgium, Switzerland, France and the Vatican. This trip he recalls as one of the bright spots of his life.

In 1921 he was appointed deacon of the Monroe district, representing the bishop in the diocese in Monroe and vicinity. The influence of the Catholic church in Monroe has been widespread throughout this section of the state. Today there are Catholic churches established and in flourishing condition in Hodge, Bastrop, Ferriday, Rayville, Tallulah and Lake Providence, all coming under the immediate jurisdiction of Rev. Vandegaer and St. Matthew's church. The church at Hodge has for its pastor, Father J. C. Marsh, former assistant pastor of the church here, while Father John Vandegaer, brother of Father N. F. Vandegaer, is pastor at Tallulah. Assisting in the work of St. Matthew's church is Father M. F. Walsh, who is regarded as one of the most capable of the younger members of the priesthood.

Members of the local congregation and unnumbered friends outside of this group, will wish for their beloved priest that he may serve many more years past the "silver jubilee" period here in Monroe.

PUBLIC FORUM

Warden, La.

To the Editor:

The writer feels that the late Rev. Charles A. Newton of Richland parish, Louisiana, who, on February 3, 1937, at his residence near Delhi and 1937, where the four northeast Louisiana parishes of West Carroll, East Carroll, Madison and Richland meet on Bayou Macon, passed in his mansion prepared for him by his Maker, has not received from the public press the due notice which might be expected of such an unusual career as that of Rev. Newton, who lived and died on the same small farm where he was born sixty years ago.

As a minister of the Gospel, a citizen, neighbor, husband and father, Mr. Newton was a very unusual and outstanding character. An incident which occurred in 1936 at a meeting of local bank officials entrusted with the duty of safely lending the money of depositors is a testimony to the influence and utter integrity of Rev. Newton, well known in his community for many years. Applications for loans were being considered. One application was from a young man named "Newton" whom none of the directors knew very well, but the remark was made, "The name sounds good to me" and the loan was made largely on the understanding that he was a family connection of Rev. Newton. Truly "a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches."

Rev. Newton was a hero; sublime in his quiet simplicity, honesty, industry and Christian faith. He was a great worker with his own hands, like St. Paul, with whom he now communes in glory as we believe, he was a real Christian soldier of the Baptist denomination, preaching and building up churches and Sunday schools in many localities. Without his strong guiding hand and heart the Baptist church with its flourishing congregation at this place, known as Richland Baptist church would not be here. And in the opinion of this writer nothing would be more beautiful and appropriate than the change in name of this church by the congregation to "Newton Memorial Church" in honor of its founder, Rev. Charles A. Newton, now passed on to his Heavenly home, whose works and influence for the right will last through ages to come.

On January 25, 1899, Mr. Newton was married to Miss Ota Pickett of this vicinity, an estimable lady and worthy companion through life. The deceased is survived by his widow, three sons and four daughters. The seven children are all worthy citizens in the communities in which they reside.

Almost A "Wreck" Before The Gly-Cas

Mrs. Guerrero Had Lost Her Appetite, Kidneys Weak, Head Ached Continually. Sleep Was Impossible. Gly-Cas Only Medicine To Help Her

acting too freely. My rest was disturbed at night and it was impossible for me to get any sleep. COTTON PICTURE WILL BE SHOWN

Film Will Be Exhibited At Perryville, Monday, And Bosco, Tuesday

"Co-op Cotton Moves to Market," a film strip with sound accompaniment, which shows graphically the varied steps through which a bale of cotton goes in its journey from the cotton fields to the spinning mills, will be shown to members of the Louisiana Cotton Cooperative association at meetings to be held at the American Legion hall near Perryville Monday at 8:15 p.m., and at Bosco, Tuesday at the same hour.

Mark W. Stroud, local representative of the association, will preside at the meetings and will discuss with the members methods by which the cotton cooperatives can better serve the members and the community in marketing the cotton crop.

The film, which was prepared by the Farm Credit administration with the assistance of the American Cotton Cooperative association and the state cotton cooperatives, depicts the workings of the organizations the farmers have set up to market their cotton. Warehousing, transportation, ginning, financing and classing are all explained both by pictures and words.

The film has been shown at other cotton-growing communities in the south, and has aroused much interest, both among cooperative members and among cotton farmers generally.

Father Vandegaer Will Be Honored By Local Church

Venerable Priest Rounds Out 25 Years Of Service In Monroe

Ranking among the oldest priests in length of continuous service as pastor of a Catholic church in Louisiana, and by far the oldest in service as head of any church congregation in Monroe, Father N. F. Vandegaer, pastor of St. Matthew's Catholic church will tomorrow have rounded out 25 years in his present capacity.

On Thursday at 9:30 a.m., there will be a special mass to commemorate the occasion. Father Vandegaer will be the celebrant; Father J. C. Marsh, of Hodge, deacon; Father J. C. Vandegaer, of Tallulah, sub-deacon; Father Plutz, of Lake Providence, will preach the sermon, and Father Walsh will be master-of-ceremonies. Following the mass, a dinner will be served at the church here. It is expected that the mass and dinner will be attended by priests from all parts of the state.

Deeply devoted to every detail that concerns his church and city, Father Vandegaer has for years exerted a strong influence in ecclesiastical and civic affairs. His one purpose has been the advancement of the church in the broadest manner possible. His vision, constructive spirit and desire to help fellow man, no matter at what personal sacrifice might be entailed, have made him beloved throughout Monroe and its entire section of the state.

His substantial family background reaches back to Belgium where his father, Daniel Vandegaer, was born, and who at 10 years of age was brought by his parents to Louisiana to live. Building, the White House and the Senate Office Building and the great new ships Normandy and Queen Mary. The year-round function of this plan is NOT to maintain sensationally low or high temperatures that bring about physical shock, but to positively control humidity and ventilation by the distribution of cleaned, washed and filtered air with temperatures set according to outside conditions and individually controlled on every floor.

Here every minute 20,000 cubic feet of air is filtered, washed, cooled and dehumidified. Here customers may shop in perfect comfort. DRIVE TO POINT trenches along a low ridge a half-mile away were plainly visible when the bombardment let up around noon. They started running along the communication trenches toward the tops of the ridges to their rear and disappeared over the crests into a narrow valley fronting the last hills.

Bombs set fire to the pine woods on the far side of the battlefields, and up into the smoke poured the insurgents, dislodging the last defenders with hand-grenades and rifle fire.

They rushed on into the valley, where lies the tiny town of Cantabasso.

Up to dark, Davila's troops continued firing the last hills tomorrow unless there should be an order to spread out to north and south and attack the stronger points of the government line from the rear.

There was great jubilation in the insurgent ranks.

"It's all over," said one officer, who seemed to voice the general feeling. "Bilbao is ours. We can take it tomorrow or the next day or whenever we feel like it."

MANY HOUSES ARE DESTROYED BY FIRE

BILBAO, Spain, June 12.—(P)—Insurgent fliers heavily bombed and machine-gunned the center of Bilbao tonight in an hour's bombardment.

Details of casualties were not available immediately, but it was believed a number of persons were killed. Many houses were destroyed by fire.

Pedestrians raced through the streets as the raiders, sweeping low, poured streams of lead from their machine guns and dropped scores of bombs.

Observers said they identified the airplanes as Junkers and Heinkels (German).

While the city itself was bombed, Basque soldiers struggled desperately to save their besieged capital from the insurgent troops.

Basque officials said their forces were holding off the enemy at a late hour despite an insurgent barrage in the afternoon in which 30 shells a minute were fired.

The fighting was so violent that a high Spanish government officer who recently arrived from the south said: "I never saw anything like this in the Madrid front."

(Insurgent General Queipo de Llano, broadcasting from Seville, said the insurgents probably would reach the outskirts of Bilbao Sunday when, he asserted, the city either would surrender, or be besieged closely.)

(He declared the insurgents would not fight in the streets of the Basque capital but would remain on surrounding heights until the city surrendered. He said it would remain in Basque hands three days longer at the most.)

Advices from outside the city proper indicated that hardly a village between Bilbao and the front lines had escaped being bombed or shelled during the day.

Nevertheless, flags flapping along Bilbao's flaming waterfront today tossed up with every puff of wind the besieged Basque capital's single word of defiance—"Invincible!"

The word is shouted everywhere. It shines on the brass buttons of Bilbao soldiers. It embroiders her banners. Street cars bear it with the city seal. It appears on every stamp issued in the province of Vizcaya.

And it's backed by the truth of history.

Bilbao has often been besieged but never captured. Red-bellied Carlists tried to take it in 1836 and failed. They tried again in 1874 and failed again. And now their grandsons, equipped with ingenious modern arms, are at the city line again.

A squad of insurgent planes bombed Bilbao's suburbs this morning. Artillery fire from beyond the Basque trenches whistled into the city, setting houses along the waterfront on fire.

But still the banners waved and the restless word danced: "Invincible!"

One Carlist siege of Bilbao lasted three years. This one has lasted only nine weeks so far. Another siege lasted a year.

Basques ate all the animals in their possession in those other fights. They feasted on seagulls and rats. They munched grass and tree roots, but they stuck it out.

They have more to eat now, but not much more. There are plenty of beans and a little cabbage, run through the insurgent blockade by British ships.

But there's no butter, no meat and no wine.

What there is to be bought can best be bought—with soap. Bank of Spain notes will do in a pinch, but United States dollars can be bought with a bar of soap.

Reason for this is that fats are the first thing to disappear in besieged cities.

Result is that men steal soap for their wives and sweethearts, and wise housewives keep their cats indoors.

GERMANY AND ITALY MAY RETURN TO PATROL

LONDON, June 12.—(P)—Germany and Italy today tentatively agreed to return to the non-intervention patrol of warring Spain.

They abandoned the patrol and the international non-intervention committee May 31 after their ships had been bombed by Spanish government planes.

Under today's agreement, drafted by British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, German Ambassador Joachim von Ribbentrop, Italian Ambassador Count Dino Grandi and French Ambassador Charles Corbin, the nations decided:

1. All warships in the patrol should have the right to defend themselves but none should take retaliatory action for an attack without first consulting the other three powers.

2. The Spanish government and the insurgent junta should be asked to "do their best" to prevent attack on patrol ships and create more safety zones where patrol ships may anchor.

3. Representatives of the 27 nations in the non-intervention committee should vote on the decision of the four-nation subcommittee when and if the warring Spanish factions agree to cooperate.

Today's agreement was designed to present another "Deutschland incident" which startled Europe into fear of another European war.

German ships took swift revenge for the bombing of the Deutschland by turning their guns on the government-held Mediterranean port of Almeria.

Opposition to the agreement is expected from Russia, which asked that discussion of bringing Germany and Italy back into the neutrality group be brought before the entire committee instead of being threshed out in secret by Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy.

A majority vote of the entire committee could defeat today's agreement, but British sources said they thought this unlikely.

In Paris, diplomatic circles indicated the agreement provides for some sort of financial and economic sanctions against any aggressor. Authorities said they "believed" there was also some sort of financial indemnity agreed upon in case a Spanish force attacks one of the patrol ships.

8 RUSSIAN ARMY

erals to death were aimed to bolster the defense of its frontiers nearest Germany.

Chief attention was devoted to the huge garrisons in White Russia and the Ukraine, the union's western and southwestern provinces, whose former commanders, General I. P. Uborevitch and L. E. Zakir, respectively, were among the doomed eight.

Scores of officers who served with these two were understood to have been arrested. All their former subordinates were considered suspect.

In the White Russian and Ukraine garrisons officers and men hastily held meetings to pass resolutions assuring the Kremlin they would embark on a great spy hunt within their own ranks to wipe out all traces of the alleged treason of their former leaders.

The government remained silent on details of the treason of the condemned men or of their fate.

Foreign diplomats in Moscow, anxious to explain the Red army purge to bewildered home governments, conned recent developments which appeared to link the doomed eight with German ambitions in eastern Europe.

Diplomats pointed to the communique announcing the death sentence to support this theory. It said the accused confessed "to being in the employ of the military intelligence service of one of the foreign states, which carries on an unfriendly campaign toward the U. S. S. R. . . . and has systematically pursued the aim of assisting in the dismemberment of the Soviet union."

They recalled Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's reference in a speech at Nurnberg last year to what the reich could do with the rich Ukraine, Russia's granary.

They recalled that a strong nationalist movement once flourished in the Ukraine, which was an independent republic during the early days of the Russian revolution, before the Soviet union was formed.

or reject them, or advertise of its own accord for lessees.

In addition, the board "shall have full supervision of all mineral leases granted by the state . . ." and "shall have authority to institute any action to annul any such lease upon any legal ground whatsoever."

Leche named the board's membership as: Robert S. Maestri, mayor of New Orleans and former state conservation commissioner; C. C. Sheppard, Clark, La., lumberman; Henry V. Howe, head of the geology department of Louisiana State university, and Charles G. Lasky, Shreveport oil man. The governor also is a member and ex-officio chairman.

The governor said the board was a "purely non-partisan" body. "Too much of the state's wealth is at stake to have a partisan mineral board," he declared.

Sheppard was president of the Louisiana Taxpayers' association, organized to oppose taxes enacted by the 1934 legislature at the instance of the late Huey P. Long.

So far during the Leche administration no mineral leases have been granted. The governor instigated this policy following charges made by political opponents that adherence to the late Long, who supported Leche, had exploited state lands.

Leche also appointed today a commission to codify all oil, gas and mineral laws and laws relative to the leasing of state lands. The code is to be submitted to the governor by January 1, 1938, and the chief executive in turn will submit it to the next regular session of the legislature.

Drawing of the mineral code, to be known as "a code of the oil, gas and mineral laws of the state of Louisiana," was authorized by the electorate by constitutional amendment. The code will be to oil what the criminal by President Roosevelt, who said evasion by the wealthy costs the government large sums.

Of the six senators appointed to the committee, King, George, Walsh and Capper have been in disagreement with President Roosevelt on the same questions, notably the court reorganization bill. LaFollette has been a staunch administration supporter on most subjects.

Harrison, closely identified with the administration leadership of the senate, also has been a strong backer of the president.

It was expected that he, with his gift for bitingly sarcastic questioning, would take a leading part in the committee's job when persons alleged to have evaded taxes take the witness stand.

What bearing the makeup of the senate half of the committee would have on the publicity features of the investigation was a subject of considerable speculation in Washington tonight.

If data contained in income tax returns is to be made public it can only be by a majority vote of the joint committee.

Harrison, however, told the senate, when the investigation resolution was up this week that "the searching light of publicity" would be turned upon any who may be found to have evaded tax payments, as one means of stopping such practices.

Hamm in an alarmed tone. "He's nuts!"

Then as an afterthought, he added: "Better assign him to the city side."

We thought that a wonderful, but not undeserved, compliment to the sports department.

ON THE CITY SIDE, then, Gene Fowler became one of the great reporters the big town has ever known. He covered all the famous stories of his reportorial time. His narration of the electrocution of Ruth Snyder and Judd Gray remains a newspaper classic to this day.

He was managing editor of the American for a time. He was first sports editor of the Daily Mirror, when the late Arthur Brisbane was running that paper, and his dices with the sports page make-up, had Mr. Brisbane in something of a dither most of the time.

Gene Fowler's bizarre sense of humor found full play when he got to monkeying with pictures and type. He joined with Mr. Joe Moore when that gentleman took over the Morning Telegraph, and put the English, so to speak, on the paper, patterning it after the London papers. Gene Fowler thought that was great fun for awhile, but the novelty wore off.

HE WAS PRESS AGENT for the late George Tex Rickard at Madison Square Garden for a time. Before he came to New York, Gene Fowler refereed a lot of fights and wrestling matches around Denver, and even managed a fighter known by the fowlesque name of Soakum Yoakum. Even now the one pastime Gene Fowler truly loves is wrestling.

Finally he went to Hollywood and became a scenario writer, and that for some years past, has been his occupation. Somehow as he went along through life, viewing the parade with saturnine eye (the one with the wilder gleam in it) Gene Fowler managed to find time to knock off two novels, "Trumpet in the Dust," and "She the Wild Mare," and two autobiographies, "The Great Mouthpiece," and "Timberline."

He wrote another novel called "Madam Silks" sold it to a publisher, then decided it was a bad job, and purloined the unpurloined manuscript out of the publisher's vault and destroyed it. To make up for it, he wrote "Trumpet in the Dust" in 30 days.

RECENTLY, he has somehow managed to find time in Hollywood to write still another novel called "Salute to Yesterday," that is to be published this fall.

"I took two years to do it," said Gene Fowler yesterday. "After reading my others, I decided that those fellows who take two years to a novel might know something, at that."

He had just planned in from California to do his annual summer hibernation on Fire Island, a hunk of sand that sticks out of the Atlantic off Great South Bay, that seems to have a strong appeal for hermits.

Gene Fowler is now around 46, and is gray about the temples, and getting stout, but we noticed that the wild gleams remain in both eyes. We recalled something we read a few days ago in a Hollywood gossip column.

"Is it true," we asked, "that you just turned down a writing contract for a movie producer for three pictures a year at $50,000 per picture, or $150,000 per picture?"

"That's correct," Gene Fowler said. "Mr. Fowler," we said, "Mr. Van Hamm was right."

HOSPITAL'S COST

I would like to build a $40,000,000 hospital. It's a worthy project."

The governor said the New Orleans hospital would be of benefit to all the state with increasingly improved road facilities for automobile travel. He estimated that at least 60 per cent of the patients received now at the hospital were from parts of the state outside of New Orleans.

Leche said that Works Progress administration experts called the plans "most economical" and were waiting only for the state to provide its share of money for start of construction. The $8,000,000 originally designated as cost of the hospital already is available, Leche said.

If the legislature decides to authorize borrowing an extra $4,000,000, Leche said, it would not be necessary to borrow that amount at once because by the time the money on hand is spent, the legislature will have met to raise the additional money.

DRIVE TO POINT

trenches along a low ridge a half-mile away were plainly visible when the bombardment let up around noon. They started running along the communication trenches toward the tops of the ridges to their rear and disappeared over the crests into a narrow valley facing the last hills.

Bombs set fire to the pine woods on the far side of the battlefields, and up into the smoke poured the insurgents, dislodging the last defenders with hand-grenades and rifle fire.

They rushed on into the valley, where lies the tiny town of Cantobas.

Up to dark, Davila's troops continued filtering into the valley, preparing to storm the last hills tomorrow unless there should be an order to spread out to north and south and attack the stronger points of the government line from the rear.

There was great jubilation in the insurgent ranks.

"It's all over," said one officer, who seemed to voice the general feeling. "Bilbao is ours. We can take it tomorrow or the next day or whenever we feel like it."

MANY HOUSES ARE DESTROYED BY FIRE

BILBAO, Spain, June 12.—(P)—Insurgent fliers heavily bombed and machine-gunned the center of Bilbao tonight in an hour's bombardment.

Details of casualties were not available immediately, but it was believed a number of persons were killed. Many houses were destroyed by fire.

Pedestrians raced through the streets as the raiders, sweeping low, poured streams of lead from their machine guns and dropped scores of bombs.

Observers said they identified the airplanes as Junkers and Heinkels (German).

While the city itself was bombed, Basque soldiers struggled desperately to save their besieged capital from the insurgent troops.

Basque officials said their forces were holding off the enemy at a late hour despite an insurgent barrage in the afternoon in which 30 shells a minute were fired.

The fighting was so violent that a high Spanish government officer who recently arrived from the south said: "I never saw anything like this in the Madrid front."

(Insurgent General Queipo de Llano, broadcasting from Seville, said the insurgents probably would reach the outskirts of Bilbao Sunday when, he asserted, the city either would surrender, or be besieged closely.

(He declared the insurgents would not fight in the streets of Bilbao capital but would remain on surrounding heights until the city surrendered. He said it would remain in Basque hands three days longer at the most.)

Advices from outside the city proper indicated that hardly a village between Bilbao and the front lines had escaped being bombed or shelled during the day.

Nevertheless, flags flapping along Bilbao's flaming waterfront today tossed up with every puff of wind the besieged Basque capital's single word of defiance—"Invincible."

The word is shouted everywhere. It shines on the brass buttons of Bilbao soldiers. It embroiders her banners. Street cars bear it with the city seal. It appears on every stamp used in the province of Vizcaya.

And it's backed by the truth of history.

Bilbao has often been besieged but never captured. Red-beretted Carlists tried to take it in 1836 and failed. They tried again in 1874 and failed again. And now their grandsons, equipped with ingenious modern arms, are at the city line again.

A squad of insurgent planes bombed Bilbao's suburbs this morning. Artillery fire from beyond the Basque trenches whistled into the city, setting houses along the waterfront on fire.

But still the banners waved and the restless word danced: "Invincible!"

One Carlist siege of Bilbao lasted three years. This one has lasted only nine weeks so far. Another siege lasted a year.

Basques ate all the animals in their possession in those other fights. They feasted on seagulls and rats. They munched grass and tree roots, but they stuck it out.

They have more to eat now, but not much more. There are plenty of beans and a little cabbage, run through the insurgent blockade by British ships.

But there's no butter, no meat and no wine.

What there is to be bought can best be bought with soap. Bank of Spain notes will do in a pinch, but United States dollars can be bought with a bar of soap.

Reason for this is that fats are the first thing to disappear in besieged cities.

Result is that men steal soap for their wives and sweethearts, and wise housewives keep their cats indoors.

GERMANY AND ITALY MAY RETURN TO PATROL

LONDON, June 12.—(P)—Germany and Italy today tentatively agreed to return to the non-intervention patrol of warring Spain.

They abandoned the patrol and the international non-intervention committee May 31 after their ships had been bombed by Spanish government planes.

Under today's agreement, drafted by British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, German Ambassador Joachim von Ribbentrop, Italian Ambassador Count Dino Grandi and French Ambassador Charles Corbin, the nations decided:

1. All warships in the patrol should have the right to defend themselves but none should take retaliatory action for an attack without first consulting the other three powers.

2. The Spanish government and the insurgent junta should be asked to "do their best" to prevent attack on patrol ships and create more safety zones where patrol ships may anchor.

3. Representatives of the 27 nations should vote on the decision of the four-nation subcommittee when and if the warring Spanish factions agree to cooperate.

Today's agreement was designed to present another "Deutschland incident" which startled Europe into fear of another European war.

German ships took swift revenge for the bombing of the Deutschland by turning their guns on the government-held Mediterranean port of Almeria.

Opposition to the agreement is expected from Russia, which asked that discussion of bringing Germany and Italy back into the neutrality group be brought before the entire committee instead of being threshed out in secret by Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy.

A majority vote of the entire committee could defeat today's agreement, but British sources said they thought this unlikely.

In Paris, diplomatic circles indicated the agreement provides for some sort of financial and economic sanctions against any aggressor. Authorities said they "believed" there was also some sort of financial indemnity agreed upon in case a Spanish force attacks one of the patrol ships.

erals to death were aimed to bolster the defense of its frontiers nearest Germany.

Chief attention was devoted to the huge garrisons in White Russia and the Ukraine, the union's western and southwestern provinces, whose former commanders, General I. P. Ubovitch and I. E. Yakir, respectively, were among the doomed eight.

Two of officers who served with these two were understood to have been arrested. All their former subordinates were considered suspect.

In the White Russian and Ukraine garrisons officers and men hastily held meetings to pass resolutions assuring the Kremlin they would embark on a great spy hunt within their own ranks to weed out all traces of the alleged treason of their former leaders.

The government remained silent on details of the treason of the condemned men or of their fate.

Foreign diplomats in Moscow, anxious to explain the Red army purge to bewildered home governments, conned recent developments which appeared to link the doomed eight with German ambitions in eastern Europe.

Diplomats pointed to the communique announcing the death sentence to support this theory. It said the accused confessed "to being in the employ of the military intelligence service of one of the foreign states, which carries on an unfriendly campaign toward the U. S. S. R. . . and has systematically pursued the aim of assisting in the dismemberment of the Soviet union."

They recalled Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's reference in a speech at Nurnberg last year to what the reich could do with the rich Ukraine, Russia's granary.

They recalled that a strong nationalist movement once flourished in the Ukraine, which was an independent republic during the early days of the Russian revolution, before the Soviet union was formed.

GOVERNOR NAMES

or reject them, or advertise of its own accord for leases.

In addition, the board "shall have full supervision of all mineral leases granted by the state . . ." and "shall have authority to institute any action to annul any such lease upon any legal ground whatsoever."

Leche named the board's membership as: Robert S. Maestri, mayor of New Orleans and former state conservation commissioner; C. C. Sheppard, Clarke, La., lumberman; Henry V. Howe, head of the geology department of Louisiana State university, and Charles G. Lasky, Shreveport oil man. The governor also is a member and ex-officio chairman.

The governor said the board was a "purely non-partisan" body. "Too much of the state's wealth is at stake to have a partisan mineral board," he declared.

Sheppard was president of the Louisiana Taxpayers' association, organized to oppose taxes enacted by the 1934 legislature at the instance of the late Huey P. Long.

So far during the Leche administration no mineral leases have been granted. The governor instigated this policy following charges made by political opponents that adherents to the late Long, who supported Leche, had exploited state lands.

Leche also appointed today a commission to codify all oil, gas and mineral laws and laws relative to the leasing of state lands. The code is to be submitted to the governor by January 1, 1938, and the chief executive in turn will submit it to the next regular session of the legislature.

Drawing of the mineral code, to be known as "a code of the oil, gas and mineral laws of the state of Louisiana," was authorized by the electorate by constitutional amendment. The code will be to oil what the criminal code is to law—a condensation of existing statutes.

Members of the codifying commission, as named by the governor, are: Sidney L. Herold, Shreveport attorney, chairman; Leander H. Perez, Dalcour, La.; C. Arthur Provost, New Iberia; William C. Feazel, Monroe, and William G. Rankin, New Orleans.

by President Roosevelt, who said evasion by the wealthy costs the government large sums.

Of the six senators appointed to the committee, King, George, Walsh and Capper have been in disagreement with President Roosevelt on the same questions, notably the court reorganization bill. LaFollette has been a staunch administration supporter on most subjects.

Harrison, closely identified with the administration leadership of the senate, also has been a strong backer of the president.

It was expected that he, with his gift for bitingly sarcastic questioning, would take a leading part in the committee's job when persons alleged to have evaded taxes take the witness stand.

What bearing the makeup of the senate half of the committee would have on the publicity features of the investigation was a subject of considerable speculation in Washington tonight.

If data contained in income tax returns is to be made public it can only be by a majority vote of the joint committee.

Harrison, however, told the senate, when the investigation resolution was up this week that "the searching light of publicity" would be turned upon any who may be found to have evaded tax payments, as one means of stopping such practices.

Ouachita Valley History Revealed In New Volume

Monroe Woman Has Large Part In Important Historical Contribution

During the past seven or eight years there has been a gradual accumulation of printed material covering the history of Ouachita parish and its adjacent area. All of it makes a more or less important contribution to the bibliography of the region. Much of it has been founded on tradition and hearsay, which left much to be desired in the way of a dependable and authentic record.

The first comprehensive and chronologically coherent story of Ouachita parish was published in the inaugural edition of the Morning World, October 20, 1929. It was not designed to be an adequate history, and as a matter of fact was little more than a piecing together of scattered published accounts, supported by such records as were readily available. It served a purpose in calling attention to the need for competent research if the real history of the region was ever to be written.

Although the public was at that time unaware of it, this task had already been undertaken by Mrs. Jennie O'Kelly Mitchell of Monroe, who had begun a systematic and exhaustive research of official records and authentic historical writings bearing on the subject. The result of that effort has just been published by the Louisiana Historical society in its current quarterly issue. The volume represents the collaborative service of Mrs. Mitchell and Judge Robert Dabney Calhoun of Vidalia, Judge Calhoun assembled the material and lent his distinguished abilities as a historian in giving the discovered facts form and coherence.

The book becomes at once the most valuable contribution that has ever been made to the recorded history of northeast Louisiana. For the first time it is possible to get an adequate picture of those glamorous days when Louisiana began to emerge from a wilderness state and to lure to its borders adventurous spirits of both the Old World and the New.

The book deals specifically with the ambitious colonization schemes of Baron de Maison Rouge, Baron de Bastrop and Colonel Abraham Morhouse (the last name spelled as its bearer always signed it)—three Ouachita valley soldiers of fortune. The volume makes no pretension of offering a sequential story of the region's history as it was affected by these adventurers. It is simply a compilation of essential facts, authenticated by copious footnotes and transcriptions from the records. And as such it offers abundant material for the use of the student of history as well as the historical novelist who insists on facts as the vehicle for his literary endeavors.

The compilers of "Three Ouachita Valley Soldiers of Fortune" begin their account with the records which indicate that DeSoto and LaSalle traversed the waters of the Ouachita during their explorations of the Mississippi valley, and that DeSoto died May 21, 1542, "near the place called Guachoya," which was in the neighborhood of what is now Ferriday, Louisiana, or farther south and in the vicinity of Red river.

The reader gets something of a thrill to learn that "when LaSalle descended the Mississippi river in 1682, his party stopped at the Taensa village of Lake St. Joseph, and it is probable that they learned there of a river of no great distance to the westward called the Ouachita and of the Indians of the same name living on its banks."

It was from this same Taensa village in the summer of 1700 that Bienville made his first exploration of the northeast Louisiana country. Bienville in his journal gives some description of the country from which it is gathered that he crossed the Ouachita between the present sites of Harrisonburg and Jonesville.

The record links up these earlier days with the struggles between France and Spain for possession of the Louisiana country, ultimately bringing the story down to the coming of Don Juan Filhiol in 1785, after having spent two years on the upper reaches of the Ouachita at Ecereafabry, where Camden now stands.

The record touches Don Juan Filhiol only incidentally, because it deals mainly with the history of the "Three Adventurers." It does, however, clear up a point that has hitherto been obscure. Filhiol was appointed commandant of the Ouachita country in 1783. He served until 1800, three years before the Louisiana purchase. According to one account, he was "dismissed" in that year. Another account says that he went to New Orleans and tendered his resignation, evidently due to difficulties which had developed over the operations of the Baron de Maison Rouge. At all events his successor was Don Vincente Fernandez Tejero, and not de la Beaume or Cotard, whose names have variously been given as the commandant during the three years the Louisiana country was handled about between Spain and France and finally acquired by the United States. The story of Maison Rouge, Bas-trap and Morhouse is an illuminating recital of the methods of adventurers of a romantic era who were quite alive to the "main chance." They were the high pressure salesmen of their time, selling to the government a colonization idea from which they hoped to reap rich profits. They planned to bring in new settlers to grow wheat and indigo, and they were to get rewards in lands. These colonization schemes were the basis for innumerable lawsuits later, long after Maison Rouge, Bastrop and Morhouse were dead. It is from the records of these suits that some of the most important material of the history is derived.

The records also prove beyond a doubt that Aaron Burr, whose name has been linked frequently with the Bastrop and Morhouse grants, was actually planning a colonization scheme of his own, without question to be employed in furthering his designs on Mexico. The record quotes from a statement of United States District Attorney Jon Hay in the Burr conspiracy trial, "It will be proved to you by express and direct evidence, that a settlement of lands on the Ouachita river was merely a cover to conceal the real design, which was to separate the Union, take possession of New Orleans, and attack the Spanish provinces." Burr, it will be recalled, was acquitted of the charge of conspiracy, because no overt act of treason had been committed by the defendant.

Names that have been identified with the history of Ouachita parish for the last hundred and fifty years liberally besprinkle the records gathered together in the volume. Besides Don Juan Filhiol, there are Augustus, Alexander and Breville Beards, who were associated with the Baron de Bastrop; Chevalier de Anemours; Eleanor Hook Grayson, the Louisiana wife of Morhouse; Henry Bry, who was the first justice of the peace of the parish; John T. Faulk, Solomon W. Downs, Grammont Filhiol, and Hypolite Pargoud, as well as a host of others whose names make only an incidental impression on the historic pages.

These are just some of the high lights of an absorbingly interesting document, which Mrs. Mitchell and Judge Calhoun have given to students of Louisiana history.

IDLE GOSSIP

There's no denying that the Monroe baseball club is in dire need of reinforcements but the situation here isn't as hopeless as some persons would lead you to believe. Every effort is being made to bolster the club and if the team isn't strengthened immediately, it will be because the owner isn't able to obtain the players he needs at once.

The rumor that the Monroe owner will "fold up" before the race is half over is without foundation. One grandstand manager is said to have predicted that Monroe's franchise will be moved to some other town and that, for one reason or other, Monroe will be without professional baseball "by the Fourth of July."

Unfortunately, there may be some persons who will believe such gossip. For the benefit of those who put credence in the tale, let it be understood now that one man will decide whether or not baseball will continue here, and that man is R. W. Burnett. And Mr. Burnett has absolutely no intention of "folding up."

To the contrary, he is bending every effort to strengthen the club and you can't convince him that Monroe won't be in the playoff when the schedule is completed.

The attendance so far has been entirely satisfactory. During the last series here, the crowds fell off to some extent but the club was in a losing streak and the same thing would have happened anywhere in the country. If the Twins had been winning and the crowds dwindling, then there would have been some excuse for the "transfer" talk. A losing club won't attract big crowds.

Joe Hunt, San Francisco, Kalamazoo or Monroe.

Fortunately, a majority of local fans pay little attention to destructive criticism when it comes from certain sources. Apparently having been vaccinated in the heel with a photograph needle, a chronic knacker runs on and on until the ever-flowing jumble of words becomes as meaningless as the foot of a tin whistle in a whirlwind.

SCHACHT A VISITOR
Al Schacht, famous baseball comedian, was a visitor Thursday. Al was en route to Houston, where he is booked for an act Monday night, and stopped by to chin a while. He worked in Jackson, Miss., Wednesday night and the fans turned out in such numbers that Jackson's all-time attendance record was broken.

Schacht is being booked in the small minors this season for the first time. He has worked for many years in the majors and occasionally in the AAs. Now his famous act is available to small club owners at "popular prices" and he hasn't failed yet to pack 'em in. It's the first opportunity many fans have had to see baseball's ace comedian.

For many years Schacht teamed up with Nick Altrock as the Washington club's comedy relief. Nick and Al finally fell out and they went through their act for a couple of seasons without speaking to each other off the field. Then they split up and Al went on his own, while Nick stayed more or less in the background. Schacht joined up with the Boston Red Sox and then later decided to sever connections with any one club and hire out as an attraction to any club that wanted his services.

Al has been out of major league territory for a month or so and he's enjoying this pioneering of new fields. He's coming back through here the latter part of June and there's a chance that he'll do his stuff before the fans at Casin' park.

NEWS FROM THE FRONT
Speaking of comedy relief, yesterday's mail brought the weekly report of Bruce I. (Urs at T-4) Hayes, veteran scout for the New Orleans Pelicans. Writing from Johnson City, Tenn., Mr. Hayes' report is as re-

Guldahl Wins U. S. Open With Record Breaking 281

TEXAN FINISHES TWO STROKES IN FRONT OF SNEAD
Guldahl Posts 69 In Exciting Final Round To Better World Record

By Alan Gould
BIRMINGHAM, Mich., June 12.—(P)—Big, stoop-shouldered Ralph Guldahl, the man who "called" his comeback shots, clinched an epic golf struggle today with a record smashing triumph in the 41st open championship of the United States.

The 25-year-old Chicago free lance professional, so destitute a year ago that a friend helped him get his clubs "out of hock," came from behind in a miraculous finish to post a world record aggregate of 281 for big time competition.

The Texas-born giant whipped old man par by seven full shots over the historic Oakland Hills layout, led his nearest rival, Slammin' Sam Snead, by two strokes, and clipped a shot from the former world and American open championship record of 282, set just one year ago at Baltusrol by Tony Manero.

Guldahl registered successive rounds of 71, 68, 72 and 69 to beat America's foremost shotmaker, from the eighth to the final hole, in a gallery of nearly 8,000 spectators wild with excitement. The winner was cheered by the biggest golf crowd since Bob Jones last won the event in 1930 at Interlachen. Jones was among the onlookers.

Trailing by one shot at the outset of the fourth and final round, Guldahl shot two birdies and an eagle to register an outgoing 33 and take a three-shot lead over Snead.

Faltering as he entered the stretch, with a pair of bogey fives that cost him all of his hard won advantage, Guldahl grinned and proceeded to "rip" the course apart with a fighting finish that sent chills running along the spine of all present.

Birdies on the 12th and 13th, due to marvelous approaches, proved decisive but they were no more vital to Guldahl's successful finish than the recoveries he made, to offset bad breaks, on two succeeding holes.

Through an eight-hole stretch in his march to victory—from the eighth to the fifteenth inclusive, Guldahl had exactly seven one-putt greens as he survived the strain that took an otherwise heavy toll among contenders in the final stages of the battle.

Almost four years ago, to the day, Guldahl, then a comparative unknown, missed a short putt on the home green and his chance to tie Johnny Goodman for the open championship at Chicago. Now he's on top of the shot making heap, with the door of opportunity open for riches as well as fame, together with a berth on the American Ryder Cup team that sails next week for England.

Guldahl won just the way he said he would. He was the first pro to start practice at Oakland Hills two weeks ago, returning to the nearby town of Pontiac with his family and to the locality where he began his financial comeback a year ago.

The victory was worth $10,000 in cash on the spot to Guldahl as the United States Golf association boosted the total prize money from $5,000 to $6,000, split among 30 players, in the customary 20.

Second money of $800 went to Snead, who performed sensationally in his first open championship, while Bobbie Cruickshank of Richmond, Va., took down $700 third prize with his 285, and "Lighthouse" Harry Cooper of Chicago, at 186, carried off fourth money of $600.

Cruickshank coming back dramatically with a 67 for the third round and finishing with a 72, missed his third gallant bid for the title since he lost a play-off to Bob Jones in 1923.

All told, five money winners bettered the record for the regulation route. Ed Dudley of Philadelphia, Pa., pace-maker for nearly two days of the closest kind of jockeying for positions, just got under the par wire with a total of 287. Big Ed, out in front by a stroke at the 34-hole mark, with 211, lost his putting touch in the stretch and took a final 72 that left him only the consolation of fifth money, $400.

Omaha's Johnny Goodman, making his bid in four years to regain the crown, carried off the medal for low amateur with final rounds of 72-75 for a total of 290. This beat Frankie Strafaci, 21-year-old Brooklyn public links star, by one stroke.

MISSOURI VALLEY TENNIS TOURNAMENT AT EL DORADO
EL DORADO, Ark., June 12.—(P)—Net stars from the south and midwest began gathering here today for the Missouri Valley Tennis association's 35th annual championship.

Approximately 100 players from 11 states are expected to be on hand for the first round of singles play Monday morning. Drawings for the singles will be held tomorrow night.

With Defending Champion Bobby Riggs of Los Angeles passing up this year's meet in favor of the National clay court tourney at Chicago, a group of St. Louis players have been installed as favorites.

The St. Louis delegation, headed by Robert (Bud) Blattner, city champion and Missouri high school titlist, and Frank Keaney, St. Louis parks champion, will stop over at Little Rock en route to the tournament for a series of exhibition games Sunday afternoon with Little Rock court stars.

States expected to be represented in the meet are Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Illinois, Missouri, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee.

Competition will be in men's and women's singles; men's and women's doubles and junior singles. Semi-finals are scheduled for Friday and finals for Saturday.

SEWELL OUT BY A STEP
Luke Sewell, Chicago White Sox catcher, was out by a step in this action photo from the "crucial" series between the two teams for leadership in the American league pennant race. Gehrig is shown pulling away from first base after the putout. New York won the game, 10 to 3.

RIGGS WINNER OF SOUTHERN TITLE
Joe Hunt, Another Californian, Beaten In Straight Sets At Nashville

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 12.—(P)—Robert Larimore Riggs, 19-year-old sharpshooter, maintained his perfect batting average for the summer tennis season today when he trounced Joe Reuben Hunt, 6-3, 6-4, 7-5, in the all-California finals of the Southern Amateur tournament.

The black-haired bundle of speed and power, in his drive to the Dixie title, lost only two sets and those to defending champion Ernest Sutter of New Orleans in the semi-finals.

Riggs, who like Hunt is from Los Angeles, began his season's campaign last week with a victory in the New England championships at Hartford, Conn.

"I've got 12 tournaments to go," said the smiling youth after the battle. "And I expect to win a large share of them."

"I was awfully glad to beat Joe and win the title. We have met something like 30 times and I have won all of the matches except four."

Hunt, seeded second behind Riggs, was obviously disappointed in losing the match. He was after the same crown his father, R. G. Hunt of Los Angeles, won in 1906.

"But the best man won," said the Lanky Hunt dejectedly.

Riggs' whistling drives hugged the chalk lines all afternoon, his accuracy forcing Hunt into numerous errors, especially as the latter tried to take the net throughout the match.

Mrs. Jean Armstrong of Pittsburgh and Betty Buxton of Memphis annexed the Southern title in the women's doubles division. They vanquished the Atlanta tandem composed of Gladys Vallebuena and Etta Taylor Coyne, 6-4, 7-5, to win impressively.

The girls' singles diadem went to little Jesse Grossnickle of Columbus, Miss., who breezed through Nashville's Yesta Dunn, blonde southpaw, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-3.

HODGE GOLFERS TO PLAY MUNY TODAY
A team of golfers representing the Municipal Golf club will meet members of the Hodge Country club in an inter-city match over the Municipal club course here, it was announced last night by C. J. Shirah, Municipal pro. The first foursome will tee off at 2:30 o'clock.

At least twenty members of each club are expected to compete in the tourney, Shirah said. The Muny pro said the list of Municipal contestants was not complete but urged all who wished to play to report at the clubhouse before 2:30 o'clock.

Shirah said recent rains helped put the Municipal course in excellent shape. Both fairways and greens are in good condition and some low scores are expected to be posted this afternoon.

CROSSETT TRIMS HODGE
CROSSETT, Ark., June 12.—(Special)—Crossett's Millers defeated the Hodge-Ha-Ha's here today, 9 to 4, in a game that has been previously rained out. A large crowd, including several high mill officials, saw the contest.

The Millers started with a four-run rally in the first inning and breezed through to an easy triumph. While, hurling for Crossett, held the Ha-Ha's scoreless for seven innings and then eased up, allowing Hodge to score twice in the eighth and twice in the ninth. Crossett added another run in the seventh and four more in the eighth.

"Bo" Sherman and Davis led the Crossett with two hits each, one of Sherman's being a double. Sprowles and Cassibry hit home runs for Hodge, each blow coming with a man on base.

TEXAN FINISHES TWO STROKES IN FRONT OF SNEAD
Guldahl Posts 69 In Exciting Final Round To Better World Record

By Alan Gould
BIRMINGHAM, Mich., June 12.—(P)—Big, stoop-shouldered Ralph Guldahl, the man who "called" his comeback shots, clinched an epic golf struggle today with a record smashing triumph in the 41st open championship of the United States.

The 25-year-old Chicago free lance professional, so destitute a year ago that a friend helped him get his clubs "out of hock," came from behind in a miraculous finish to post a world record aggregate of 281 for big time competition.

The Texas-born giant whipped old man par by seven full shots over the historic Oakland Hills layout, led his nearest rival, Slammin' Sam Snead, by two strokes, and clipped a shot from the former world and American open championship record of 282, set just one year ago at Baltusrol by Tony Manero.

Guldahl registered successive rounds of 71, 68, 72 and 69 to beat America's foremost shotmaker, from the eighth to the final hole, in a gallery of nearly 8,000 spectators wild with excitement. The winner was cheered by the biggest golf crowd since Bob Jones last won the event in 1930 at Interlachen. Jones was among the onlookers.

Trailing by one shot at the outset of the fourth and final round, Guldahl shot two birdies and an eagle to register an outgoing 33 and take a three-shot lead over Snead.

Faltering as he entered the stretch, with a pair of bogey fives that cost him all of his hard won advantage, Guldahl grinned and proceeded to "rip" the course apart with a fighting finish that sent chills running along the spine of all present.

Birdies on the 12th and 13th, due to marvelous approaches, proved decisive but they were no more vital to Guldahl's successful finish than the recoveries he made, to offset bad breaks, on two succeeding holes.

Through an eight-hole stretch in his march to victory—from the eighth to the fifteenth inclusive, Guldahl had exactly seven one-putt greens as he survived the strain that took an otherwise heavy toll among contenders in the final stages of the battle.

Almost four years ago, to the day, Guldahl, then a comparative unknown, missed a short putt on the home green and his chance to tie Johnny Goodman for the open championship at Chicago. Now he's on top of the shot making heap, with the door of opportunity open for riches as well as fame, together with a berth on the American Ryder Cup team that sails next week for England.

MONROE GETS 12 HITS BUT FAILS TO SCORE A RUN

Tabbs Tight In Pinches And Seaporters Sweep Series, Winning Final 6-0

HELENA, Ark., June 12.—(Special)—Monroe's Twins made 12 hits here today but they couldn't score a run, and the Helena Seaporters won, 6 to 0, to sweep the three-game series with

THREE NEW PLAYERS
R. W. Burnett, owner of the Monroe club, advised The World by telegram from Tyler, Tex., last night that he would take two new pitchers and an outfielder to join the Monroe club at Clarksdale Monday.

Mr. Burnett did not reveal the identity of the three new players but said he would wire their names Monday.

The Louisiana club. It was the sixth straight victory for Helena and Monroe's fifth consecutive defeat.

The Twins had opportunities to score in every inning but just when it seemed that the Monroe club would push over a run, Julian Tubbs, ace of the Helena staff, would "bear down" and the cellarites were kept from home plate all afternoon. In fact, it looked as if Tubbs was tantalizing the Twins. He'd let 'em get on base in every inning and then tighten up and prevent them from scoring. Monroe had 13 men left stranded on the sacks.

Britton Horton, a southpaw, went the route for Monroe. The Seaporters got 11 hits off his delivery, one less than Monroe got off Tubbs. But Horton wasn't near as effective in the pinches as his mound opponent. He also gave up four bases on balls. Monroe continued its scoring jumble, backing up Horton with some sensational work. "Red" Bortum at shortstop and Allen Bell at second each handled six chances perfectly to lead the Twins in the field.

Helena started off in the first inning with two runs. The Seaporters bunched three hits for the pair of tallies. Carlin and Ligon doubled in succession, with Carlin crossing the plate, and then Olson singled to send Ligon home. Big Curtis Suber playing his second game as a member of the Helena club, hit a home run in the fourth inning to make it 3-0 for the locals. Then in the fifth Helena added another when Tubbs hit a home run and the Seaporters added their final runs in the eighth when they were sent home by a single by Olson when Olson and Weiler scored. Tubbs was the third Helena pitcher to hit a home run during the Monroe series.

All of the Twins' hits were singles. Walter Butler led the Monroe attack with three hits in four trips to the plate, with Bortum and Manager Eddie Hock getting two hits each. Suberlin, Olson and Tubbs each hit safely twice for Helena.

The Twins cross the Mississippi river and into Oklahoma for two games Sunday. Manager Eddie Hock said that he was undecided on his pitching selections for the pair of games but indicated that Sam Cavanaugh was next.

He tapered off with a round with Bill Irbly.

Today's session with gloves left the champion with only five more boxing drills before he enters the ring to defend the title he won from Max Baer two years ago tomorrow, against the challenge of the Brown Bomber. He will box tomorrow, Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday.

LOUIS WORKS SIX
KENSAS, Wis., June 12.—(P)—Mike Jacobs of New York, co-promoter of the 15-round battle between Heavyweight Champion James J. Braddock and Joe Louis at Chicago June 22, paid a surprise visit to the Brown Bomber's camp today, causing a change in the day's training plans, as well as some excitement.

Trainer Jack Blackburn had announced that Louis would take a full-sized 15-round boxing workout today to test his stamina. After a conference with Jacobs, however, the drill was trimmed to six sessions with the gloves.

Jacobs, reported to be concerned over Louis' somewhat ragged work in drills, sat with the Bomber's co-managers, John Roxborough and Julian Black at the ring-side, watching intently every move by the challenger. He departed without offering comment.

Louis appeared to be spurred by the presence of Jacobs and hustled through six rounds of boxing with three sparring partners. The challenger cut loose with a more forceful offense than he has shown in any previous workout.

IDLE GOSSIP
There's no denying that the Monroe baseball club is in dire need of reinforcements but the situation here isn't as hopeless as some persons would lead you to believe. Every effort is being made to bolster the club and if the team isn't strengthened immediately, it will be because the owner isn't able to obtain the players he needs at once.

The rumor that the Monroe owner will "fold up" before the race is half over is without foundation. One grandstand manager is said to have predicted that Monroe's franchise will be moved to some other town and that, for one reason or other, Monroe will be without professional baseball "by the fourth of July."

Unfortunately, there may be some persons who will believe such gossip. For the benefit of those who put credence in the tale, let it be understood now that one man will decide whether or not baseball will continue here, and that man is R. W. Burnett. And Mr. Burnett has absolutely no intention of "folding up."

To the contrary, he is bending every effort to strengthen the club and you can't convince him that Monroe won't be in the playoff when the schedule is completed.

The attendance so far has been entirely satisfactory. During the last series here, the crowds fell off to some extent but the club was in a losing streak and the same thing would have happened anywhere in the country. If the Twins had been winning and the crowds dwindling, then there would have been some excuse for this "transfer" talk. A losing club won't attract big crowds, whether it be in New York, San Francisco, Kalamazoo or Monroe.

Fortunately, a majority of local fans pay little attention to destructive criticism when it comes from certain sources. Apparently having been vaccinated in the heel with a phonograph needle, a chronic grouser runs on until the ever-flowing tumble of words becomes as meaningless as the foot of a tin whistle in a whirlwind.

SCHACHT A VISITOR
Al Schacht, famous baseball comedian, was a visitor Thursday. Al was en route to Houston, where he is booked for an act Monday night, and stopped by to chin a while he worked in Jackson, Miss., Wednesday night and the fans turned out in such numbers that Jackson's all-time attendance record was broken.

Schacht is being booked in the small minors this season for the first time. He has worked here for many years in the majors and occasionally in the AAs. Now his famous act is available to small club owners at "popular prices" and he hasn't failed yet to pack 'em in. It's the first opportunity many fans have had to see baseball's ace comedian.

For many years Schacht teamed up with Nick Altrock as the Washington club's comedy relief. Nick and Al finally fell out and they went through their act for a couple of seasons without speaking to each other off the field. Then they split up and Al went on his own, while Nick stayed more or less in the background. Schacht joined up with the Boston Red Sox and then later decided to sever connections with any one club and hire out as an attraction to any club that wanted his services.

Al has been out of major league territory for a month or so and he's enjoying this pioneering of new fields. He's coming back through here the latter part of June and there's a chance that he'll do his stuff before the fans at Casin' park.

NEWS FROM THE FRONT
Speaking of comedy relief, yesterday's mail brought the weekly report of Bruce I. (Urs a T-4) Hayes, veteran scout for the New Orleans Pelicans. Writing from Johnson City, Tenn., Mr. Hayes' report is as follows:

SEWELL OUT BY A STEP

Luke Sewell, Chicago White Sox catcher, was out by a step in this action photo from the "crucial" series between the two teams for leadership in the American league pennant race. Gehrig is shown pulling away from first base after the putout. New York won the game, 10 to 3.

RIGGS WINNER OF SOUTHERN TITLE

Joe Hunt, Another Californian, Beaten in Straight Sets At Nashville

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 12.—(P)—Robert Larrimore Riggs, 19-year-old sharpshooter, maintained his perfect batting average for the summer tennis season today when he trounced Joe Reuben Hunt, 6-3, 6-4, 7-5, in the all-California finals of the Southern Amateur tournament.

The black-haired bundle of speed and power, in his drive to the Dixie title, lost only two sets and those to defending champion Ernest Sutter of New Orleans in the semi-finals.

Riggs, who like Hunt is from Los Angeles, began his season's campaign last week with a victory in the New England championships at Hartford, Conn.

"I've got 12 tournaments to go," said the smiling youth after the battle, "and I expect to win a large share of them."

"I was awfully glad to beat Joe and win the title. We have met something like 30 times and I have won all of the matches except four."

Hunt, seeded second behind Riggs, was obviously disappointed in losing the match. He was after the same crown his father, R. G. Hunt of Los Angeles, won in 1906.

"But the best man won," said the Lanky Hunt dejectedly.

Riggs' whistling drives hugged the chalk lines all afternoon, his accuracy forcing Hunt into numerous errors, especially as the latter tried to take the net throughout the match.

Mrs. Jean Artzburger of Pittsburgh and Betty Buxton of Memphis annexed the Southern title in the women's doubles division. They vanquished the Atlanta tandem composed of Gladys Vallebona and Rita Taylor Coyne, 6-4, 7-5, to win impressively.

The girls' singles division went to little Jesse Grossnickle of Columbus, Miss., who breezed through Nashville's Vesta Dunn, blonde southpaw, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-3.

Manager Herbert Stied will start either Trumpay Mayes or "Lefty" Counts on the mound for the locals with E. Duncan doing the catching. The Vols will probably use either Sunnett or Aiken with Cox catching.

HODGE GOLFERS TO PLAY MUNY TODAY

A team of golfers representing the Municipal Golf club will meet members of the Hodge Country club in an inter-city match over the Municipal club course here, it was announced last night by C. J. Shirah, Municipal pro. The first foursome will tee off at 2:30 o'clock.

At least twenty members of each club are expected to compete in the tourney, Shirah said. The Muny pro said the list of Municipal contestants was not complete but urged all who wished to play to report at the clubhouse before 2:30 o'clock.

Shirah said recent rains helped put the Municipal course in excellent shape. Both fairways and greens are in good condition and some low scores are expected to be posted this afternoon.

TEXAN FINISHES TWO STROKES IN FRONT OF SNEAD

By Alan Gould
BIRMINGHAM, Mich., June 12.—(P)—Big, stoop-shouldered Ralph Guldahl, the man who "called" his comeback shots, climaxed an epic golf struggle today with a record smashing triumph in the 41st open championship of the United States.

The 25-year-old Chicago free lance professional, so destitute a year ago that a friend helped him get his clubs "out of lock," came from behind in a miraculous finish to post a world record aggregate of 281 for big time competition.

The Texas-born giant whipped old men par by seven full shots over the historic Oakland Hills layout, led his nearest rival, Slammin' Sam Snead, by two strokes, and clipped a shot from the former world and American open championship record of 282, set just one year ago at Baltusrol by Tony Manero.

Guldahl registered successive rounds of 71, 69, 72 and 69 to beat America's foremost shotmakers in a finish that had par absolutely groggy and a gallery of nearly 8,000 spectators wild with excitement. The winner was cheered by the biggest golf crowd since Bob Jones last won the event in 1930 at Interlachen. Jones was among the onlookers.

Trailing by one shot at the outset of the fourth and final round, Guldahl shot two birdies and an eagle to register an outgoing 33 and take a three-shot lead over Snead.

Faltering as he entered the stretch, with a pair of bogey fives that cost him all of his hard won advantage, Guldahl grunted and proceeded to "rip" the course apart with a fighting finish that sent chills running along the spines of all present.

Birdies on the 12th and 13th, due to marvelous approaches, proved decisive but they were no more vital to Guldahl's successful finish than the recoveries he made, to offset bad breaks, two in succession.

Through an eight-hole stretch in his march to victory—from the eighth to the fifteenth inclusive, Guldahl had exactly seven one-putt greens as he survived the strain that took an otherwise heavy toll among contenders in the final stages of the battle.

Through a four-year gap, to the day, Guldahl, known as a short putt on the home green and his chance to tie Johnny Goodman for the open championship at Chicago. Now he's on top of the shot making heap, with the door of opportunity open for riches as well as fame, together with a berth on the American Ryder Cup team that sails next week for England.

Guldahl won just the way he said he would. He was the first pro to start practice at Oakland Hills two weeks ago, returning to the nearby town of Pontiac with his family and to the locality where he began his financial comeback a year ago.

The victory was worth $1,000 in cash on the spot to Guldahl as the United States Golf association boosted the total prize money from $5,000 to $6,000, split among 30 players, instead of the customary 20.

Second money of $800 went to Snead, who performed sensationally in his first open championship, while Bobby Cruickshank of Richmond, Va., took down $700.

With his 283, and "Lighthorse" Harry Cooper of Chicago, at 186, carried off fourth money of $600.

Cruickshank, coming back dramatically with a 67 for the third round and finishing with a 72, missed his third gallant bid for the title since he lost a play-off to Bob Jones in 1922.

All told, five money winners bettered par for the regulation route. Ed Dudley of Philadelphia, Pa., pace-maker for nearly two days of the closest kind of jockeying for positions, just got under the par wire with a total of 287. Big Ed, out in front by a stroke at the 34th hole, with 211, lost his putting touch, and the streak and took a final 76 that left him only the consolation of fifth money, $450.

Omaha's Johnny Goodman, making his best bid in four years to regain the crown, carried off the medal for low amateur with final rounds of 72-75 for a total of 260. This beat Frankie Surafo, 21-year-old Brooklyn public links star, by one stroke.

Victims of the biggest blowups were Frank Walsh of Chicago and Jimmy Thomson, the Shawnee "siege gun." Both were tied for the lead at the halfway mark, with Guldahl and Dudley, but passed out of the picture with third round 78's. Thomson, with a finger infection on his left hand, finished under painful handicap with 296 to Walsh's 295.

FIRPO HURLS NO-HITTER
GALVESTON, June 12.—(P)—The veteran Fred Marberry, Dallas right-hander, stopped the Galveston Buccaneers without a hit here tonight to register a 3-0 victory. The triumph was the sixth in a row for the Steers.

The game was at first scored as a one-hitter, with Ray Fritz, Galveston first baseman, getting the benefit of a close play at first, but the official score changed his decision after a conference with Umpire Joe Pate at the end of the game.

Pate said he called Fritz safe because Mickey Rocco, Steer first baseman, had been pulled off the bag by the throw from Jim Levey, Steer shortstop. Levey had handled the ball cleanly, but made a looping, wide throw.

From the press box there had been doubt as to whether Fritz safe because Mickey Rocco was off the bag.

Orville Armbrust went the route for the Buccaneers and pitched a good ball of ball. Sensational support was given both pitchers.

OLIVERS BEAT MISSIONS
SAN ANTONIO, June 12.—(P)—The San Antonio Missions ran into too much Ivy Stein here tonight and bowed to the Tulsa Oilers, 6 to 2, for their only loss of the three-game tri-series.

Stein scattered eight hits, rather well while his mates were swatting out ten hits, only four of which were for single bases. The Oilers collected five doubles and a triple and terminated the game with their second double play.

SHIPPERS TRIM INDIANS

Jacobs, reported to be concerned over Louis' somewhat ragged work in drills, sat with the Bomber's co-managers, John Roxborough and Julian Black at the ringside, watching intently every move by the challenger. He departed without offering comment.

Louis appeared to be spurred by the presence of Jacobs and hustled through six rounds of boxing with three ap-pirates. The challenger got loose with a more forceful offense than he has shown in any previous workout.

MONROE GETS 12 HITS BUT FAILS TO SCORE A RUN

Tabbs Tight In Pinches And Seaporters Sweep Series, Winning Final 6-0

HELENA, Ark., June 12.—(Special)—Monroe's Twins made 12 hits here today but they couldn't score a run, and the Helena Seaporters won, 6 to 0, to sweep the three-game series with

THREE NEW PLAYERS
R. W. Burnett, owner of the Monroe club, advised The World by telegram from Tyler, Tex., last night that he would take two new pitchers and an outfielder to join the Monroe club at Clarksdale Monday.

Mr. Burnett did not reveal the identity of the three new players but said he would wire their names Monday.

the Louisiana club. It was the sixth straight victory for Helena and Monroe's fifth consecutive defeat.

The Twins had opportunities to score in every inning but just when it seemed that the Monroe club would push over a run, Julian Tabbs, ace of the Helena staff, would "bear down" and the cellarites were kept from home plate all afternoon. In fact, it looked as if Tabbs was tantalizing the Twins. He'd let 'em get on base in every inning and then tighten up and prevent them from scoring. Monroe had 13 men left stranded on the sacks.

Britton Horton, a southpaw, went the route for Monroe. The Seaporters got 11 hits off his delivery, one less than Monroe got off Tabbs. But Horton was as near as effective in the pinches as his mound opponent. He also gave up four bases on balls. Monroe continued its sterling play all day, backing up Horton with some sensational work. "Red" Borum at shortstop and Allen Bell at second each handled six chances perfectly to lead the Twins in the field.

Helena started off in the first inning with two runs. The Seaporters bunched three hits for the pair of tallies. Carlin and Ligon doubled in succession, with Carlin crossing the plate, and then Olson singled to send Ligon home. Big Curtis Sutherland, playing his second game as a member of the Helena club, hit a home run in the fourth inning to make it 3-0 for the locals. Then in the fifth Helena added another when Tabbs hit a home run and the Seaporters added their final runs in the eighth when they sent two tallies scampering across when Olson and Weiser scored. Tabbs was the third Helena pitcher to hit a home run during the Monroe series.

All of the Twins' hits were singles. Walter Butler led the Monroe attack with three hits in four trips to the plate, with Borum and Manager Eddie Hock getting two hits each. Sutherland, Carlin and Tabbs each hit safely twice for Helena.

The Twins cross the Mississippi river and invade Clarksdale for two games Sunday. Manager Eddie Hock said that he was undecided on his pitching selections for the pair of games but indicated that Sam Cavanaugh would be in the lineup.

duced by homers. Alex Kampouris hit his tenth of the year with the bases empty in the fourth, and Spud Davis contributed his first of the season with Buck Jordan aboard in the eighth. In the ninth, Ernie Lombardi opened with a pinch-smash, but Melton, summoned from the bullpen, fanned Chick Hafey and got both Kiki Cuyler and Charley Gelbert to force out.

The real hero of the game, however, was Ott. After Lou Chiozza singled and Jim Rippel reached base on Lew Riggs' error, Ott slammed a hit off the grandstand facade in right, his ninth of the year.

The winning run was produced in the fifth on a walk to Chiozza and Rippel's single, with Chiozza scoring when Ival Goodman fumbled the play on Rippel's hit.

PIRATES TRIM DODGERS

BROOKLYN, June 12.—(AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates pounded Roy Henshaw for five runs in the seventh inning today to whip the Dodgers, 8 to 3, behind the effective hurling of Cy Blanton.

Blanton, winning his seventh victory against two defeats for the season, was touched for 11 hits, but fanned 11 batters to pull out of several tight spots.

Heinie Manush accounted for all the Dodgers' runs with a homer with two mates on base which sent the Brooklyn out in front.

Pittsburgh tied it up with a run in the second and two more in the third.

Crosetti Hits Two Homers And Gehrig Gets One Before Brownies Rally

ST. LOUIS, June 12.—(AP)—Joe Vosmik came through "in the clutch" today with a two-run double in the ninth inning that enabled the Browns to come from behind and top the New York Yankees 7 to 6.

With his team a run behind, two mates on base and two out, Vosmik drove a hard smash to left center, sending in Tom Carey with the tying run and Harry Davis with the winning tally.

The winning hit came off old Pat Malone, who had relieved Lefty Gomez in the eighth and who was charged with the defeat. Elton Hoggsett, who went the route, holding the Yanks to eight hits, including three homers, on his second day.

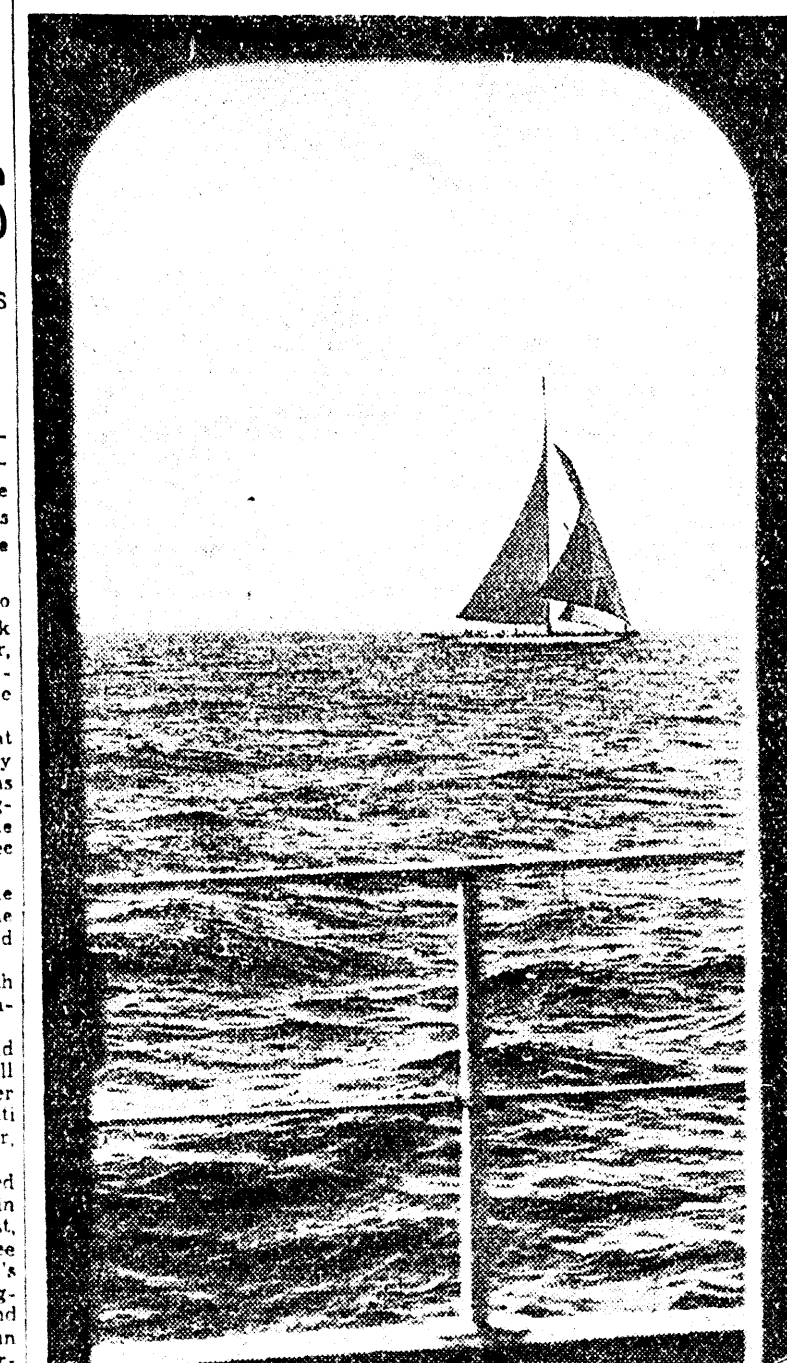

Frank Crosetti hit two homers, one of them in the ninth, which put the Yanks ahead, and Lou Gehrig clouted his tenth of the year.

The Yanks opened the scoring with a five-run spurge in the fourth inning.

Gehrig started with his homer, and after Bill Dickey and Jake Powell had hit doubles to bring in another run, and Tony Lazzeri walked, Crosetti connected for his first round-tripper, driving three tallies across.

All afternoon the Browns chased the Yanks, getting their first run in the fourth on singles by Sam West, Beau Bell and Harold Cliff; three more in the fifth on Rolfe Hemley's double, an error, Hoggsett's two-bagger, Davis' base hit and West's fly, and tying it up in the eighth with a run on Vosmik's single, Jake Powell's error and Beau Bell's hit.

FRAMED IN ALL HER GLORY

Framed in all her glory in this beautiful shot from an observation ship, Harold S. Vanderbilt's Ranger finishes a 28-mile windward-leeward race, from Brenton's Reef lightship to Block Island's north reef buoy and back, more than two minutes ahead of Gerard B. Lambert's Yankee. An elimination series has made Ranger the favorite to defend the America's Cup against T. O. M. Sopwith's second British challenger, Endeavour II, off Newport, starting July 31.

To win the 10-inning nightcap, 5 to 4, 40,520 fans.

A ball pitched by Louis (Buck) Newsum featured a home run in the fifth arm of Ray Hayworth, Detroit catcher, in the fourth inning of the second game. Physicians said he would be out of the lineup for at least three or four weeks.

The defeat stopped the Tigers' winning streak at six games and kept Detroit from advancing to a virtual tie with the New York Yankees for first position in the American league.

REAPING REWARD LATONIA WINNER

Milky Way Star Beats Eagle Pass In $15,000 Race; Winner Hurt In Stretch

COVINGTON, Ky., June 12.—(AP)—Reaping Reward, odds-on favorite of the Milky Way stable, won the 55th running of the $15,000 added Latonia Derby today, pulling ahead but going lame through the last furling of the mile and a quarter course.

Eagle Pass was second, three quarters of a length behind, in a photo finish which found the Valdivia farm three-year-old a nose to the good over John Hay Whitney's Flying Scot, the lone eastern contender, and Mrs. W. H. Furst's Over The Top.

Reaping Reward, whose injury probably will keep him from the American Derby next Saturday, ran the distance in 2:03.8 on a track sun-crusted but lightly underlaid with moisture from recent rains.

The race was worth $12,800 to the winner, besides a silver trophy presented by Governor A. R. Chandler.

Reaping Reward, show horse in the Kentucky Derby, was smartly ridden by Jockey Alfred Robertson and was well up with the pace from the start. He ran behind Flying Scot until the turn into the home stretch, when Robertson called for more speed. The mutuels paid $3.80, $2.80 and $2.20 on the winner, 47 and 4 on Eagle Pass and $3.40 on Flying Scot.

CHICAGO, June 12.—(AP)—John Hay Whitney of New York shipped his champion filly of the east, Inhale, a thousand miles to run three-quarters of a mile at Washington Park race track today.

The filly went to the post a 3 to 5 favorite to win the $20,000 Princess Pat Stakes, for two-year-old fillies, but when the numbers went up in a photographic finish the winner was a western juvenile, Well Rewarded, running with Marie O'Hara as the entry of Mrs. Ethel V. Marx of Chicago, owner of the famed Milky Way Farm stables.

Well Rewarded and the 18 to 1 outsider, Hermans, from the Valdivia Stable of Virginia, furnished all the thrills for the crowd of 23,000. Well Rewarded, with Jockey Buddy Haas driving the whip down the stretch drive, finished the length of her head in front of Hermans, with Inhale two lengths back.

Hermans, longest price filly in the race, outstepped her more fashionable opponents to lead the field of five as they turned into the stretch. Inhale, ridden by Jockey L. Balaski, failed to be the threat expected and was floundering under her heavy impost of 122 pounds, unable to cut away any of the ground that separated her from the leaders.

The race had a gross value of $20,310 with $11,370 going to Mrs. Marx as first prize. She also got an additional $1,000 as a result of Marie O'Hara finishing fourth.

The Marx entry was second choice in the betting, and the winning miss paid $7.20, with $3.40 to place. The place bet on the long shot Hermans was $12.40. There were no show tickets sold on the race.

BARTELLI LEAGUE'S LEADING HITTER WITH .351

HACK DROPS TO 4TH PLACE TIE WITH .324 MARK

Haynes Only Other Monroe Player Hitting Over .300; Bucks Best As Club

Art Bartelli, big Vicksburg right fielder, took over the batting lead in the Cotton States league last week with a mark of .351, according to official league averages released yesterday. Bartelli replaces Clary Hack, Monroe outfielder, who held the lead last week. Hack tied for fourth place among the regulars this week with a .324 average.

Following Bartelli in the batting department are Bagrocky, Greenville infielder, with .320; Grant, Pine Bluff first baseman, with .326, and Kinzer, Greenville shortstop, with .324. The next five in the "big ten" are Kirby Farrell, Greenville first sacker, with .322; Ray McElreath, Greenwood outfielder, with .320; Baker, Greenwood first baseman, with .311, and Tene, El Dorado outfielder, with .307.

The Greenville club is leading the league in batting and tied for the lead in fielding. The Bucks are hitting at a .283 clip and their fielding average is .958, the same as Helena's. Vicksburg is second in team batting with .276. Monroe ranks third with .258. Greenwood fourth with .255. Clarkdale fifth with .254. Pine Bluff sixth with .249. El Dorado seventh with .247 and Helena last with .242.

Following Greenville and Helena in fielding is Pine Bluff with a .957 mark. El Dorado is next with .933. Monroe ranks fifth with .930. Clarkdale is sixth with .947. Greenwood seventh with .946 and Vicksburg brings up the rear with .942.

Kirk Haynes is the only other Monroe player in the .300 class. He is batting .301. Manager Eddie Hock is next on the local list with .294. Cully Rickard is hitting .284. Clair Bates' average is .256. "Red" Borum's is .234 and Walter Butler is hitting .220.

Clifford Johnson's average when he was transferred to Texarkana was .260.

Bartelli is the league's leading home run hitter, having snapped up 11 circuit clouts. His nearest rival is Maurice El Dorado shortstop, who has hit 12. Grant has hit 18 doubles to lead in that department. "Red" Sheehan, Greenwood outfielder, has hit the most triples, nine. Kinzer is leading in runs batted in, with 31.

Bartelli has scored more runs than any other player in the league, 46, while Bagrocky and Farrell have made most hits, 63.

The averages, which include games of last Sunday, reveal that Zaje, of Pine Bluff, is the leading hurler with nine victories and two defeats. Ware, of Vicksburg, has won eight and lost two, while Jack Van Orsdel, ace of the Monroe staff, shows seven victories and two losses.

Other of Monroe hurlers include Johnny Burrows, now suspended, with two and one; Britton Horton, with five wins and five losses; Gould Powers, recently released, with three and five, and Bill Kent traded to Texarkana Friday, with two wins and eight losses.

Old Ted Willis, of Pine Bluff, is the league's strikeout leader with 78. Kent is the league's runner in strikeouts.

HEMP HOLD

A referee works overtime to untangle Pat Meehan, who appears to be suffering from a rope strangle in a San Francisco exhibition. "The Red Phantom" jammed the hapless Mr. Meehan's noggin in there. In wrestling, the show's the thing, even at the risk of necks.

VETERAN MILLROSE STAR FIRST IN A. A. U. MARATHON

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—Mel Porter, veteran runner for the Millrose Athletic club of New York, pounded to victory in the National A. A. U. marathon today.

The stout, sun-tanned athlete covered the 26-mile, 385 yard course from historic Mount Vernon to the White House in 2 hours, 44 minutes and 42 seconds—almost a half-mile ahead of the rest of the runners.

with 70. Horton is close behind with 61 while Van Orsdel has fanned 42.

Kent has the dubious distinction of losing the most bases on balls, 43, closely followed by Stefurak, of El Dorado, with 44. Horton has walked 40 and Van Orsdel but 26.

GEHRIG, MEDWICK LEAD IN BATTING

National League Leaders' Gains Feature Week in Major League Hitting

NEW YORK, July 12.—(AP)—Despite the continued clouting of Lou Gehrig, to climb to the top of the American league batting race, the National league leaders, generally, created the bigger splash in the big time hitting pond this week.

Ducky Medwick, setting the hottest pace the majors have seen for some time, not only retained the National league laurels, but clubbed over eight hits in 18 chances to boost his average to .413, the only better-than-.400 regular in either circuit. Gehrig, meanwhile, had nine hits in 23 times at bat for a league leading mark of .383, in the season averages including yesterday's games.

Four other National leaguers, rather than Medwick, stole the hitting spotlight, however. Buck Jordan, coming back in a Cincinnati uniform, hit 429 for the week to shoot into a second place tie with .381; Ole Heinie Manush, another come-backer, with Brooklyn, clouted for 475 to boost his mark to .349 and fifth place; Dolph Camilli, Phillies, hit better than .500 and took sixth with .346, and young Ken O'Dea of the Cubs hit an even .500 for seventh, with .345.

Best week-long performance in the American league was by Charley Gehring of the Tigers, with ten hits in 23 chances.

Few fishermen this season have been as well rewarded as were Max and Roland Pink. Yesterday afternoon they spent a couple of hours at Black Bayou and came back with 19 beauties.

The bass weighed from two and a half to four pounds each and the well filled string was displayed last night for an hour or so at a DeSiard street hardware store where many fishermen gazed longingly at the prizes.

Later, Max and Roland distributed the catch among their friends along "lower Broadway," as Sam Rubin has designated that portion of DeSiard which runs from Third street to Five Points. Needless to state, the boys along "lower Broadway" were unanimous in their opinion that the Pink brothers rate in the upper bracket of Monroe fishermen.

BARTELLI LEAGUE'S LEADING HITTER WITH .351

Haynes Only Other Monroe Player Hitting Over .300; Bucks Best As Club

Art Bartelli, big Vicksburg right fielder, took over the batting lead in the Cotton States league last week with a mark of .351, according to official league averages released yesterday. Bartelli replaced Clary Hack, Monroe outfielder, who held the lead last week. Hack tied for fourth place among the regulars this week with a .324 average.

Following Bartelli in the batting department are Bagrosky, Greenville infielder, with .330; Grant, Pine Bluff first baseman, with .326; and Kinzer, Greenville shortstop, with .324. Next five in the "big ten" are Kirby Farrell, Greenville first sacker, with .322; Ray McCreath, Greenwood outfielder, with .312; Baker, Greenwood first baseman, with .311, and Toney, El Dorado outfielder, with .307.

The Greenville club is leading the league in batting and tied for the lead in fielding. The Bucks are hitting at a .283 clip and their fielding average is .958, the same as Helena's. Vicksburg is second in team batting with .276. Monroe ranks third with .258. Greenwood fourth with .255. Clarkdale fifth with .254. Pine Bluff sixth with .249. El Dorado seventh with .247 and Helena last with .242.

Following Greenville and Helena in club fielding is Pine Bluff with a .957 mark. El Dorado is next with .953. Monroe ranks fifth with .950. Clarkdale is sixth with .947. Greenwood seventh with .946 and Vicksburg brings up the rear with .942.

Kirk Haynes is the only other Monroe player in the .300 class. He is batting .301. Manager Eddie Hock is next on the local list with .284. Cully Rickard is hitting .284. Clair Bates' average is .284. "Red" Borum's is .234 and Walter Butler is hitting .225.

Clifford Johnson's average when he was transferred to Texarkana was .280.

Bartelli is the league's leading home run hitter, having slapped out 17 circuit clouts. His nearest rival is Mascot of El Dorado shortstop, who has hit 12. Grant has hit 10 doubling to lead in that department. "Red" Sheehan, Greenwood outfielder, has hit the most triples, nine. Kinzer is leading in runs batted in, with 51.

Bartelli has scored more runs than any other player in the league, 46, while Bagrosky and Farrell have made most hits.

The averages, which include games of last Sunday, reveal that Zajac, of Pine Bluff, is the leading hurler with nine victories and two defeats. Ware, of Vicksburg, has won eight and lost two, while Jack Van Orsdol, ace of the Monroe staff, shows seven victories and two losses. "Red" Sheehan, Greenwood, has won five and lost two, and Bill Kent traded to Texarkana Friday, with two wins and eight losses.

Old Ted Wills, of Pine Bluff, is the league's strikeout leader with 78. Kent tops the Monroe hurlers in strikeouts

GEHRIG, MEDWICK LEAD IN BATTING

National League Leaders' Gains Feature Week In Major League Hitting

NEW YORK, July 12.—(AP)—Despite the continued clouting of Lou Gehrig, to climb to the top of the American league batting race, the National league leaders, generally, created the bigger splash in the big time hitting pond this week.

Ducky Medwick, setting the hottest pace the majors have seen for some time, not only retained the National league laurels, but clubbed over eight hits in 18 chances to boost his average to .413, the only better-than-.400 record in either circuit. Gehrig, meantime, had nine hits in 23 times at bat for a league leading mark of .383, in the season averages including yesterday's games.

Four other National league leaders, rather than Medwick, stole the hitting spotlight, however. Jack Jordan, coming back in a Cincinnati uniform, hit .429 for the week to shoot into a second place tie with .381; Ole Heinie Manush, another come-backer, with Brooklyn, clouted for .476 to boost his mark to .349 and fifth place; Dolph Camilli, Phillies, hit better than .500 and took sixth with .346, and young Ken O'Dea of the Cubs hit an even .300 for seventh, with .345.

Best week-long performance in the American league was by Charley Gehrigner of the Tigers, with ten hits in 23 chances.

Her new addition to the Monroe staff, would start the first game. Cavalier lost a close 4-3 decision to Greenville in his first appearance as a Monroe hurler. If Bill Vandenberg, acquired yesterday from Texarkana in trade for Bill Kent, arrives in time Sunday morning, he will be used in the second game. Manager Hock said he was hopeful that Cully Rickard, outfielder who was spiked in the Greenville series, would return to the lineup at Clarkdale. Rickard has been recuperating at his home in Mississippi since the accident.

Pine Bluff continued its breeze toward the Cotton States league pennant Saturday by defeating Vicksburg, 6 to 3, while Greenville moved into the hotly contested second berth in an 11 to 7 night victory over Clarkdale. Zajac went the route for the Judges, yielding seven hits.

Greenville used three hurlers to achieve its win from the Red Sox. They gave up 13 hits, two more than the Bucks could make off two Clarkdale pitchers.

Vicksburg's loss slid it into third place ahead of the Greenwood Little Giants, who took a 5 to 3 encounter from El Dorado. The Lions outthrew them, 10 to 9, but four errors weakened their cause.

WORK STARTS ON M'GUIRE BUILDING

New Addition Being Built On Clubhouse To Be Ready For Big Tourney

Work has started on the addition to the McGuire Park Golf club clubhouse. Jim McKenzie, McGuire, announced last night, and the remodeled building will be ready for the club's big amateur golf tournament on July 31 and August 1.

A locker room is being built for women players and several other improvements will be made by the time the tournament starts, McKenzie said. The clubhouse will be large enough to accommodate the large number of golfers expected to compete.

Leading players of the south and southwest have been invited to enter the tourney and many are expected to accept, McKenzie said. Several stars who have won championships in the nation's important tournaments will play in the McGuire event. A prize list totaling more than $1,000 will be offered and the tournament is said to be the most elaborate ever attempted here.

The course is in the best condition of its history, McKenzie said. Recent rains have made the fairways like carpets and the greens never have been in better condition.

Tourney entrants must post their qualifying scores by July 30, it has been announced. Match play starts on July 31 and will be completed on Sunday, August 1.

Placards announcing the tournament were mailed to clubs in Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas and Mississippi last week, it was announced.

The parishes to be represented include Webster, Union, Claiborne, Lincoln, Morehouse, West Carroll, East Carroll, Madison, Texas, Richland, Franklin, Caldwell, Ouachita, Jackson and Bienville.

Similar meetings for bus drivers in the other three divisions of the state are scheduled as follows: District No. 2, Louisiana State Normal college, July 24; district No. 3, Southwestern Louisiana institute, July 23, and district No. 4, Louisiana State university, July 22.

The meetings have been arranged following conferences by T. H. Harris, state superintendent of education; Colonel E. P. Roy, assistant state superintendent of highway police, and Jesse W. Hair, state supervisor of health, physical and safety education.

A letter from Mr. Hair to parish superintendents and college presidents states that "we request that every white school bus driver in your parish who is given a contract for the 1937-38 season be present. For the purpose of economy and safety, I suggest that your school board request enough of your best buses to bring these drivers to your conference. It probably also would be advisable to remind the drivers to bring along sun hats and shaded glasses."

"The purpose of the bus drivers' conferences is strictly educational. The state department of highway police is collaborating with us to the fullest extent to assist us in promoting the safe transportation of our school children."

H. L. Campbell, Lincoln parish superintendent of schools, will preside at the meeting to be held at Tech.

MAJOR DOUGHTY RECEIVES HONOR

Resolution Commends Tullos Man For Work For Schools 40 Years Ago

A much appreciated even if a somewhat belated recognition of a man's action that blazed a trail for the advancement of education in Louisiana came near the close of the year's work of the class of 1937 of the Uria and Olla-Standard High school, when it passed a resolution commending Major Doughty of Tullos. Forty years ago, Major Doughty, father of D. M. Doughty of Monroe, was the proponent of the first tax voted by a political group in Louisiana for making possible a nine months' school session.

As school board member in Catahoula parish, Mr. Doughty secured passage of a measure providing for a tax for a nine months' session of schools in that parish. The plan has been perused by many parishes since it was first initiated there. Now living at his home in Tullos and at an advanced age, suffering from an incurable disease, he was cheered by the action of the high school class mentioned which was embodied in a resolution commending the action blazed the trail for similar subsequent action by other parishes of the state.

D. M. Doughty, of Monroe, yesterday expressed much pleasure at the action which also was made the subject of an editorial in the Jena Times entitled, "Flowers for the Living."

His father, himself deprived of educational advantages, was always an outstanding friend of high schools and colleges and served for many years on the board of education in Catahoula parish.

He was of pioneer stock and possessed of old-fashioned sterling integrity, farming a small plantation, and raising a family of 10 children. Many times he found it a difficult task to make a living but he was steadfast in his refusal, no matter how hard pressed he might be financially, to place a mortgage on his home place.

Through the years he was a great admirer and constant supporter of the late Henry E. Hardner, president of the Uria Lumber company, and prominent alike in industry and politics. Many times in company with Mr. Hardner he campaigned the parish from end to end, greeting each voter whom he knew personally in behalf of Mr. Hardner.

Despite his limited means, Mr. Doughty was ever regarded as a first class risk, for he never sought credit for anything that he would not be able to pay out in a few weeks.

As the end of life seems near at hand, the sons and daughters of Mr. Doughty, all of whom have carved out for themselves success in various walks of life, have gathered frequently at the bedside of their parent.

In recognizing the action taken by the high school, D. M. Doughty wrote them the following: "As we see his sun setting, his character looms before us as a lone chimney surviving a great conflagration. Please permit me on behalf of those who know him best, to offer an expression of gratitude for the reception given our dear father while he is yet alive."

SONS OF LEGION ENJOY BOAT RIDE

A most enjoyable evening was spent by the members of the Sons of the American Legion, John A. McClain squadron, as guests of Captain and Mrs. G. B. Cooley, on their boat Weto, on the Ouachita river, Wednesday night.

Members met at Cooley's landing in the early evening and after a trip to Pine Top, returned several hours later. The sanatorium was visited by the members of the party.

Approximately 25 members made the trip and six new members joined the squadron, who also enjoyed the boat ride. The new members were John Savage, Jr., Robert Wood, Leonard Rosedale, Henry Smith, William Simpson, and Berkeley Simpson.

Refreshments were served during the boat ride and the boys sang the official song of the Sons of the Legion which they will sing at the time of the holding of the state convention here.

The next meeting will be held at the Legion home Wednesday, June 16, which has been designated as "mothers' night" and all mothers of members are invited to this meeting as well as mothers who wish to have their sons join the organization.

Several others on the boat besides Captain and Mrs. Cooley and squadron members were Mrs. Ben Stern, Mrs. Sam Orchard, Sam Orchard, Legion chairman, and Charles Kramer.

PARISH TO VOTE ON TAX TUESDAY

Lincoln To Decide On Continuance Of 5-Mill Road Maintenance Levy

RUSTON, La., June 12.—(Special)—Whether Lincoln parish will continue for another 10 years a five-mill tax for road maintenance and construction will be determined by voters Tuesday. The tax has expired after having been collected for the past decade, during which time more than 260 miles of farm roads have been built and improved, it is stated.

Both a majority of the popular vote and property assessments will be required for approving renewal of the tax. A pre-election survey in the parish by interested parties has revealed wide favor of continuing the tax, it has been reported.

Officials of the Lincoln parish police jury, who are sponsoring the renewal, point out that oil and gas development in this section has resulted in heavier traffic and that the roads probably cannot be maintained in their present condition without continuation of the assessment. They

Lincoln To Decide On Continuance Of 5-Mill Road Maintenance Levy

RUSTON, La., June 12.—(Special)—Whether Lincoln parish will continue for another 10 years a five-mill tax for road maintenance and construction will be determined by voters Tuesday. The tax has expired after having been collected for the past decade, during which time more than 260 miles of farm roads have been built and improved, it is stated.

Both a majority of the popular vote and property assessments will be required for approving renewal of the tax. A pre-election survey in the parish by interested parties has revealed wide favor of continuing the tax, it has been reported.

Officials of the Lincoln parish police jury, who are sponsoring the renewal, point out that oil and gas development in this section has resulted in heavier traffic and that the roads probably cannot be maintained in their present condition without continuance of the assessment. They

Numerous Monroe Residents Prepare To Leave On Summer Vacation Trips

Many Will Visit On Coast Or Mountains

Children Planning Happy Days At Camps; June Weddings Claim Much Interest

By Eve Bradford

The valley now holds the summer to its heart. The perfect days are here and those who want to drop "the world, the flesh and the devil" prepare to leave the city and refresh their minds and hearts far from the maddening crowd where the great cosmic thoughts might come and go. The ranks of society will soon be depleted with everyone planning a trip either overseas, to the coast or the mountains.

Several popular members of the younger set who have been leading a hectic life since school closed are now looking forward to the tang of the pine, the pale moon's shimmering path across rippled waters, sunsets over distant brooding hills and the sweet, cool smell of woodland mornings in camps tucked away in cool climates far from the beaten tracks.

Mable Cole, Dottie White and Marilyn Marshall will be off later in the month for Camp Carlyle and Gay Noe will spend the summer horse-back riding, swimming and boating at Camp Waldemar in Texas. Jean Graves' heart is in SeNakanawa, Mayland, Tenn., so she will be off very soon now. Lizzie McGuire has molded the summer very close to her heart's desire—she will act as counsellor at Camp Sequoyia, Bristol, Va., leaving Monroe June 29 with several Monroe girls.

The girls are not getting all the breaks this summer, however. Thrills aplenty will be enjoyed by Jimmy Noe, Tommy Sandridge and Henry Guerrero, Jr., at Gulf Park Military camp on the Gulf of Mexico.

Patsy Dryburgh, who had the time of her life in the mountains of North Carolina last summer, is counting the days until the time comes for her to leave with Stella and Arthur for a long blissful summer at the same resort.

Patricia Kaplan and Betty Isaacman will soon be in a veritable whirl of gadding—their flitting will be almost world wide with the exotic glamour of Paris bringing to conclusion their jaunt through Europe.

"All the world loves a lover" and "June is the month for brides and roses" are two old sayings familiar to Monroe this year. Not in years have there been so many lovely brides and who have chosen June for their ceremonials, and every week engagements are announced. Don't we all feel like Burns, the poet did, when we see a lovely June bride appear before us in the candlelit church aisle or before the flower strewn altar in her own home? All the filmy tulle, the glistening white flowers, the shimmering satin and the vibrant music only go to enhance the charm and personality of the bride. It is her day and her radiance is something one never forgets. This year the designers have conspired to make the wedding gowns more glamorous, the going-away tulle more intriguing and the bridesmaids' costumes more effective than ever.

When Suzanne Hirsch walks down the aisle next Wednesday night you will agree with Burns that "to see her is to love her and love but her forever, for nature made her what she is and never made another."

Suzanne, an artist of unusual ability never put on canvas anything as beautiful as her wedding pageant will be. For her matron of honor she has selected Helen Thorsen; for her maid of honor, Edwina Hirsch; for her bridesmaids, Pargie Hudson, Alyce Florsheim, Carolyn Caine and Fanny Denney. Betty Meyer came all the way from Denver to sing the love ballads for Suzanne. Dr. Edward Solomon, Suzanne's fiancé, has selected Dr. Adolph Loveman of Louisville for his best man. His groomsmen will be Irvin Trost, Jack Adler, Paul Rich, Harry Markstein and Bernie Steiner of Birmingham. The ushers will be Phillip Trost of Birmingham, Henry Haas, Jr., Herbert Levy and Walker Glenn, Jr.

Swift on the heels of the Hirsch-Solomon will come the Beaman-Vaughan nuptials. The wedding march will lead Doris and Luther to a shining new apartment in Houston, sufficiently close to Doris' sister, Winnie Hilliard, and her adorable daughter, so that daily visits can be exchanged. Friends have commenced already to worry over the prospects of Doris' father and mother, Roy and Winnie Beaman, pulling up stakes and leaving for Houston now that both daughters will reside there.

Joy Steele is the latest victim succumbing to Dan Caid's darts. Graduating from college and announcing her engagement during the same month is thrilling enough to satisfy even the most romantic minded maid.

For those who remain at home watching the summer move along in the old familiar grooves, there is always the pleasure of receiving breezy little messages from those who travel far. Word comes from the Sigmond Maurs who were in Paris for several days en route to Brussels. The Hague, Amsterdam, Lucerne and then to Nice. A North Cape cruise in July will end their summer abroad.

A wedding of interest to their many friends was that of Miss Dixie Calhoun Stewart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Stewart, of the North Louisiana Agricultural Experiment station, at Calhoun, La., to Mr. Fred Derward Cochran, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Cochran of Ware Shoals, South Carolina, Saturday evening, June 5, at 7 o'clock.

Friends gathered at the nuptial hour in the garden of the Stewart home to witness the ceremony performed by Rev. A. W. Townsend of New Orleans.

A pre-nuptial concert was rendered while the guests were assembling with Mr. Jerry Hodge, pianist, and Mrs. J. E. Bryan and Mrs. Claude Roberts, the vocalists. They sang "Sweethearts."

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Billie Francis Stewart, who wore a lovely coronation blue lace gown, long and full, with short puffed sleeves, and carried a sheaf of Shasta daisies tied with lengths of illusion.

David Louis Borman, III, of Franklinton, La., and Jocelyn Townsend of New Orleans were pages.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a beautiful white lace model, princess style, and a short bridal veil. She carried a bouquet of white roses and valley lilies.

The wedding vows were taken before an improvised altar arranged with old-fashioned bouquets. The bridal party entered by way of a white-rope aisle to the strains of the wedding march from "Lohengrin."

Mr. Cochran was attended by his brother, Mr. Lewis Cochran of Clinton, S. C., as best man.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony, with the bride and groom and their attendants and Mr. and Mrs. Stewart standing to receive the guests.

The central motif of the bride's table was the wedding cake, embossed in valley lilies and bride's roses, encircled with a solid mass of Shasta daisies. Petit fours embossed in valley lilies were served with individual ices.

The bride changed her wedding attire for a smart tailor of navy blue with white accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Cochran left on their wedding trip to South Carolina to visit the bridegroom's parents. They will, upon their return, make their home in Baton Rouge, where Mr. Cochran is employed as research horticulturist for the experiment stations, and Mrs. Cochran is secretary and editor for the Louisiana experiment stations.

Several lovely pre-nuptial compliments were given the bride and she received many beautiful gifts of crystal, linen, china and sterling silver.

Miss Cicero Weds Joseph Colca

Claiming the interest of friends in this section of the state and California was the marriage of Miss Sara Elizabeth Cicero, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Cicero, Sr., and Mr. Joseph Colca, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Colca, Los Angeles, at St. Matthew's Catholic church, on Sunday, June 6, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, with Father N. F. Vandegard officiating. Mr. George LeBlanc, altar boy, assisted during the ceremony.

Mr. Don Breitenmoser, presiding at the organ, rendered a pre-nuptial concert while the guests were being seated.

The setting for this event was unusually beautiful with myriad cathedral tapers burning in the midst of flowers banking the altar and overflowing from picturesque urns.

The bride was attended by Mrs. Joseph Cicero, matron of honor. She wore a pink silk lace floor-length model. Miss Mattie Cicero, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. She wore a blue lace model, trimmed in blue net. Miss Annie Lee Binagay as bridesmaid. They both wore peach and green floor-length models, princess style. They all wore flattering halo hats and carried bouquets of pink Killarney roses.

Mr. Colca had as his best man Mr. James Cicero. The groomsmen were Mr. Danielle Fasi and Mr. Phillip J. Embanato. The ushers were Mr. Joseph Corroero and Dr. Joseph Cicero.

The flower girl, Annette Pitarro, wore a white lace frock and carried an old fashioned bouquet. The ring-bearer, Angelo Danna, carried the ring in the heart of a white lily.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a handsome wedding gown of white satin, fashioned along princess lines with tight fitting bodice, long full sleeves and a court train. Her veil of illusion was caught to the hair with a coronet of valley lilies. She carried a beautiful bouquet of white carnations and valley lilies.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the Columbus Social club, where the bride and bridegroom stood to receive the congratulations and best wishes of relatives and friends. Refreshments were served and later dancing was enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Colca left for a short honeymoon, and upon their arrival will be at home to their friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Colca, 1910 Albion street, Los Angeles, Calif.

Numerous Monroe Residents Prepare To Leave On Summer Vacation Trips

Many Will Visit On Coast Or Mountains

Children Planning Happy Days At Camps; June Weddings Claim Much Interest

The valley now holds the summer to its heart. The perfect days are here and those who want to drop "the world, the flesh and the devil" prepare to leave the city and refresh their minds and hearts far from the maddening crowd where the great comic thoughts might come and go. The ranks of society will soon be depleted with everyone planning a trip either overseas, to the coast or the mountains.

Several popular members of the younger set who have been leading a hectic life since school closed are now looking forward to the tang of the pine, the pale moon's shimmering path across rippled waters, sunsets over distant brooding hills and the sweet, cool smell of woodland mornings in camps tucked away in cool climates far from the beaten tracks.

Mable Cole, Dottie White and Marilyn Marshall will be off later in the month for Camp Carlyle and Gay. Noe will spend the summer at hostess back riding, swimming and boating at Camp Waldemar in Texas. Jean Graves heart is in SeNakanawa, Mayland, Tenn., so she will be off very soon now. Lizzie McGuire has molded the summer very close to her heart's desire—she will act as counselor at Camp Sequoyia, Bristol, Va., leaving Monroe June 23 with several Monroe girls.

The girls are not getting all the breaks this summer, however. Thrills aplenty will be enjoyed by Jimmy Tommy Sandridge and Henry Guerrero, Jr., at Gulf Park Military camp on the Gulf of Mexico.

Patsy Dryburgh, who had the time of her life in the mountains of North Carolina last summer, is counting the days until the time comes for her to leave with Stella and Arthur for a long blissful summer at the same resort.

Patricia Kaplan and Betty Isaacman will soon be in a veritable whirl of gadabouts—their flitting will be almost wide with the exotic glamour of Paris bringing to conclusion their jaunt through Europe.

"All the world loves a lover" and "June is the month for brides and roses" are two old sayings familiar to the world and are being exemplified in Monroe this year. Not in years have there been so many lovely brides who have chosen June for their ceremonials, and every week engagements are announced. Don't we all feel like Burns, the poet did, when we see a lovely June bride appear before us in the candlelit church aisle or before the flower strewn altar in her own home? All the filmy tulle, the glistening white flowers, the shimmering satin and the vibrant music only go to enhance the charm and personality of the bride. It is her day and her radiance is something one never forgets. This year the designers have conspired to make the wedding gowns more glamorous, the going-away tulle more intriguing and the bridesmaids' costumes more effective than ever. When Suzanne Hirsch walks down the aisle next Wednesday night you will agree with Burns that "to see her is to love her and love but her forever, for nature made her what she is and never made another."

Suzanne, an artist of unusual ability never put on anything as beautiful as her wedding gown will be. For her matron of honor she has selected Helena Thorgeson; for her maid of honor, Edwina Hirsch; for her bridesmaids, Patsy Hudson, Alyce Florheim, Carolyn Caine and Fanny Denney. Betty Meyer came all the way from Denver to sing the love ballads for Suzanne. Dr. Edward Solomon, Suzanne's fiancé, has selected Dr. Adolph Loveman of Louisville for his best man. His groomsmen will be Irvin Trost, Jack Adler, Paul Rich, Harry Markstein and Bernie Steiner of Birmingham. The ushers will be Phillip Trost of Birmingham, Henry Haas, Jr., Herbert Levy and Walker Glenn, Jr.

Swift on the heels of the Hirsch-Solomon will come the Beaman-Vaughan nuptials. The wedding march will lead Doris and Luther to a shining new apartment in Houston, sufficiently close to Doris' sister, Winnie Helen Hilliard, and her adorable daughter, so that daily visits can be exchanged. Friends have commenced already to worry over the prospects of Doris' father and mother, Roy and Winnie Beaman, pulling up stakes and leaving for Houston now that both daughters will reside there.

Joy Steele is the latest victim succumbing to Dan Cupid's darts. Graduating from college and announcing her engagement during the same month is thrilling enough to satisfy even the most romantic minded maid. For those who remain at home watching the summer move along in the old familiar grooves, there is always the pleasure of receiving breezy little messages from those who travel far. Word comes from the Sigmund Masurs who were in Paris for several days en route to Brussels, The Hague, Amsterdam, Lucerne and then to Nice. A North Cape cruise in July will end their summer abroad.

A wedding of interest to their many friends was that of Miss Dixie Calhoun Stewart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Stewart, of the North Louisiana Agricultural Experiment station, at Calhoun, La., to Mr. Fred Derward Cochran, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Cochran of Ware Shoals, South Carolina, Saturday evening, June 5, at 7 o'clock.

Friends gathered at the nuptial hour in the garden of the Stewart home to witness the ceremony, performed by Rev. A. W. Townsend of New Orleans.

A pre-nuptial concert was rendered while the guests were assembling with Mr. Jerry Hodge, pianist, and Mrs. J. E. Bryan and Mrs. Claude Roberts, the vocalists. They sang "Sweethearts."

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Ellie Francis Stewart, who wore a lovely: coronation blue lace gown, long and full, with short puffed sleeves, and carried a sheaf of Shasta daisies tied with lengths of illusion.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a beautiful white lace model, princess style, and a short bridal veil. She carried a bouquet of white roses and valley lilies.

The wedding vows were taken before an improvised altar arranged with old-fashioned bouquets. The bride and groom entered by way of a white-roofed aisle to the strains of the wedding march from "Lohengrin."

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony, with the bride and groom and their attendants and Mr. and Mrs. Stewart standing to receive the guests.

The central motif of the bride's table was the wedding cake, embossed in valley lilies and bride's roses, encircled with a solid mass of Shasta daisies. Petit fours embossed in valley lilies were served with individual ices.

The bride changed her wedding attire for a smart tailor of navy blue with deep accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Cochran left on their wedding trip to South Carolina to visit the bridegroom's parents. They will, upon their return, make their home in Baton Rouge, where Mr. Cochran is employed as research horticulturist for the experiment stations, and Mrs. Cochran is secretary and editor for the Louisiana experiment stations.

Miss Joy Steele And Lattimer Lafitte Lewis To Marry On Third Of August

Wedding To Be Held At Bride's Residence

Nuptials Will Unite Two Prominent Families Of Louisiana And Alabama

An announcement claiming the undivided interest of society in this section is that made today by Mr. and Mrs. James Campbell Steele of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Joy, to Mr. Lattimer Lafitte Lewis of Tuscaloosa, Ala., son of Mrs. Lula Boyce Lewis and the late Mr. George Clement Lewis of Eutaw, Ala.

The wedding, characterized by charming simplicity, will take place at the home of the bride's parents, on the third of August.

Miss Steele, one of the most popular members of the younger set in this city and a young woman of charming personality, is a descendant of two old southern families. Her great-grandparents settled in Ouchita and Union parishes before the War Between the States. Her mother, formerly Miss Anna Hill, was born in Union parish and has resided in this vicinity all of her life.

Miss Steele's father is a prominent figure in civic and industrial circles of this city. He is president of the J. C. Steele Lumber company and a director of the People's Building and Loan association.

Miss Steele graduated from Gulf Park college and the University of Alabama. She is a member of Alpha Gamma Delta and Pi sororities.

Mr. Lewis, on his paternal side, is a direct descendant of the Lewis family of Fredericksburg, Va., famed for the Lewis and Clarke expedition. His father was the son of Charles L. Lewis and Marie Lafitte Lewis, who was the daughter of the historical John B. Lafitte of Paris, France. Mr. Lewis' maternal grandfather, J. P. Boyce of Scotland, who settled in Charleston, S. C., was president of the Kentucky Baptist Theological seminary for many years.

Mr. Lewis attended Tennessee Military institute and Baylor university in Texas.

Federated Club Leader To Marry

Thousands of clubwomen throughout the world as well as many other admiring friends will be interested to learn of the engagement and forthcoming marriage of Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, former president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and Dr. Henry Gilbert Reynolds of Paducah, Ky. The wedding will take place in the fall and Dr. Reynolds will take his bride to live in Kentucky.

No club woman is more widely known or more greatly beloved than Mrs. Poole. In addition to her long service in the general federation, climaxed by three years as president, she has been a popular lecturer on current events and international affairs, and is accounted one of the country's most able and compelling speakers. Her administration of the general federation was notable for the introduction of controversial subjects into convention programs when both sides were discussed by qualified speakers followed by general discussion.

Upon her retirement from the presidency of the federation, she was made dean of Stoneleigh college, a school for girls, at Rye, N. H., a position which she has filled with distinction for the past two years. Mr. Poole died in 1919.

Mrs. Poole is leaving shortly for a trip abroad, taking a party of twenty for a tour of England, Northcape and Russia.

Dr. Reynolds is head of the eye and ear department of the Illinois Central hospital in Paducah. He is a member of the College of Surgeons and the American Medical association. Mrs. Reynolds died two years ago. She will be remembered as a former treasurer of the general federation.

Mrs. Reynolds and Mrs. Poole were devoted friends and among her last club activities was the planning and carrying to a successful conclusion the "Grace Morrison Poole Birthday Party for the Foundation Fund" at Hot Springs, Ark., council meeting in 1934.

In 1932 Mrs. Poole was the guest of honor at the annual convention of the Louisiana Federation of Women's Clubs which met in Alexandria. Her topic was "Come Let Us Reason Together." At this time Louisiana clubwomen presented Mrs. Poole with such a great number of gifts that it became the responsibility of the local convention chairmen to see them safely in Mrs. Poole's home.

Tommie Jane Lawhead Celebrates Birthday

Tommie Jane Lawhead's third birthday anniversary on June 8 was a joyous event, as she was privileged to invite her most intimate friends to share the pleasures with her at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Lawhead, with her mother, Mrs. Dale Lawhead, assisting in the courtesies.

The young celebrant, wearing a fluffy party dress, welcomed her friends in the shady garden where streamers of gaily colored crepe paper and clusters of pink balloons hung from the spreading branches of the trees.

Garden baskets overflowing with pink and blue hydrangeas were grouped in the background where the tea table and chairs were grouped. The birthday cake, a delicious confection beautifully embossed in pink and supporting three pink candles, was cut by the celebrant during the refreshment hour. Ices and tea cakes and all-day suckers, disguised as dolls in pink crepe paper skirts were served. Balloons were presented each guest before departure.

Assisting Tommie Jane's grandmother and mother during the afternoon were: Mrs. T. W. Douglas, Mrs. Gladys Vaughan, Miss Mattie Douglas, Mrs. Roy Loper, Mrs. Doris Fassman, Miss Freida Hanks, Miss Mary Elizabeth Mahr, Miss Elizabeth Shaugnessy, Mrs. Emma Shipp and Mrs. Addie Walker.

Mrs. Oliver Bouanchaud, formerly Miss Clara Averette of West Monroe, is being welcomed in younger married circles in Baton Rouge, where she and Mr. Bouanchaud will make their future home.

The following account of a tea in Mrs. Bouanchaud's honor will be of interest to friends in the Twin Cities: Charming among June affairs was the tea which Mrs. E. V. Fasse and her sister, Miss Gwendolyn Thomas gave yesterday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock at the Fasse home in Bernard Grove to honor a former schoolmate and sorority sister, Mrs. Oliver Bouanchaud, the former Clara Averette of West Monroe, who is an interesting addition to the younger married set here.

Many guests called during the hours of the tea which was delightfully arranged. Mrs. Gordon Ogden received at the door, and was wearing a smart gown of white organdy with candlewick tufts of rose and blue. Also assisting in the living room were Mrs. Muller Hochenedel, wearing tucked white organdy, and Miss Elizabeth Stafford, who wore a pink lace gown with a long lace coat.

The honoree received with the two hostesses, Mrs. Fasse wore a black chiffon gown and Miss Thomas blue mouseline de soie trimmed with pleated ruffles, while Mrs. Bouanchaud's gown was of old rose taffeta, very bouffant, with an overskirt of matching net. All wore corsages of gladioli and mixed summer blossoms.

Punch was served in the study, where Mrs. Glenn S. Darsoe presided at the round table. She was wearing smart black net and was assisted in serving by Miss Terry Thomas, younger sister of the hostesses, and their cousin, Miss Juliet Singletary. Miss Thomas wore a figured crepe model with blue redingote and Miss Singletary appeared in peach chiffon.

The coffee table was laid in the dining room and was elegantly set with an antique silver bowl of orchid-pink gladioli. The six tapers which burned in three-branched silver candelabra were of the same hue as the flowers. The cloth was an ivory lace one. Mrs. J. Hall LeBlanc, mother of the hostesses, poured coffee from a silver service. She was wearing a lace gown of string color.

Assisting about the coffee table were Miss Nell Clark, who wore flowered taffeta, and Miss Frances Wharton of Slidell, whose navy chiffon gown was topped by a red and white and black-checked taffeta jacket.

The interest of friends is centered in the announcement of the marriage of Miss Margaret Myra Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Hill of West Monroe, and Mr. Louis M. Ray Sunday afternoon, June 6, with Rev. E. E. Huntberry officiating, in the presence of a few friends and members of the family.

The bride wore a beautiful aquamarine blue crepe model with accessories of the same color and carried an arm bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies.

The bride was a member of this year's graduating class of the Ouchita Parish High school.

Mr. Ray is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Ray of West Monroe.

The young couple are now at home at 203 North Seventh street, West Monroe.

Mrs. R. B. Lyman and her grandchildren, Miss Ardeth Terza, William and Richard Terza, of Bastrop, left last week for Saginaw, Mich., where they will join Mr. Terza and make their home in the future.

Miss Joy Steele And Lattimer Lafitte Lewis To Marry On Third Of August

Nuptials Will Unite Two Prominent Families Of Louisiana And Alabama

An announcement claiming the undivided interest of society in this section is that made today by Mr. and Mrs. James Campbell Steele of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Joy, to Mr. Lattimer Lafitte Lewis of Tusculoussa, Ala., son of Mrs. Lula Boyce Lewis and the late Mr. George Clement Lewis of Eutaw, Ala.

The wedding, characterized by charming simplicity, will take place at the home of the bride's parents, on the third of August.

Miss Steele, one of the most popular members of the younger set in this city and a young woman of charming personality, is a descendant of two old southern families. Her great-grandparents settled in Ouchita and Union parishes before the War Between the States. Her mother, formerly Miss Anna Hill, was born in Union parish and has resided in this vicinity all of her life.

Miss Steele's father is a prominent figure in civic and industrial circles of this city. He is president of the J. C. Steele Lumber company and a director of the People's Building and Loan association.

Miss Steele graduated from Gulf Park college and the University of Alabama. She is a member of Alpha Gamma Delta and Pi sororities.

Mr. Lewis, on his paternal side, is a direct descendant of the Lewis family of Fredericksburg, Va., famed for the Lewis and Clarke expedition. His father was the son of Charles L. Lewis and Marie Lafitte Lewis, who was the daughter of the historical John B. Lafitte of Paris, France. Mr. Lewis' maternal grandfather, J. P. Boyce of Scotland, who settled in Charleston, S. C., was president of the Kentucky Baptist Theological seminary for many years.

Mr. Lewis attended Tennessee Military institute and Baylor university in Texas.

Federated Club Leader To Marry

Thousands of clubwomen throughout the world as well as many other admiring friends will be interested to learn of the engagement and forthcoming marriage of Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, former president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and Dr. Henry Gilbert Reynolds of Paducah, Ky. The wedding will take place in the fall and Dr. Reynolds will take his bride to live in Kentucky.

No club woman is more widely known or more greatly beloved than Mrs. Poole. In addition to her long service in the general federation, climaxed by three years as president, she has been a popular lecturer on current events and international affairs, and is accounted one of the country's most able and compelling speakers. Her administration of the general federation was notable for the introduction of controversial subjects into convention programs when both sides were discussed by qualified speakers followed by general discussion.

Upon her retirement from the presidency of the federation, she was made dean of Stoneleigh college, a school for girls, at New H. H., a position which she has filled with distinction for the past two years. Mrs. Poole died in 1919.

Mrs. Poole is leaving shortly for a trip abroad, taking a party of twenty for a tour of England, Northcape and Russia.

Dr. Reynolds is head of the eye and ear department at the Illinois Central hospital in Paducah. He is a member of the College of Surgeons and the American Medical association. Mrs. Reynolds died two years ago. She will be remembered as a former treasurer of the general federation. Mrs. Reynolds and Mrs. Poole were devoted friends and among her last club activities was the planning and carrying to a successful conclusion the "Grace Morrison Poole Birthday Party for the Foundation Fund" at Hot Springs, Ark., council meeting in 1934.

In 1932 Mrs. Poole was the guest of honor at the annual convention of the Louisiana Federation of Women's Clubs which met in Alexandria. Her topic was "Come Let Us Reason Together." At this time, Louisiana clubwomen presented Mrs. Poole with such a great number of gifts that it became the responsibility of the local convention chairman to take them safely to Mrs. Poole's home.

AFRAID to Love

by MARION WHITE

CHAPTER VIII
Joan had planned to leave the office early on Wednesday, in order not to be late for Sybil's tea. But at the last minute, a sudden change in Mr. Hendry's plans detained her. She regretted not having time to run home and change, because she needed the composure that fresh clothes might have lent.

Sybil would be perfect and her friends would be quick to note any imperfections in her. Their attitude, she felt sure, would be patronizing. Socially secure in their own superiority, they were bending down to her, a stenographer, and their eyes and ears would be critical.

She remembered what Bob had said about Sybil. "Whatever social success I've had, I owe it to her." It had helped him in his business, too. That would be her job from now on. She must be able to do as much for him as Sybil Hendry had. Because of that, so much depended upon today. Upon her first meeting with these women who would be her neighbors.

Some of them she had met at the Spring Frolic. Because of her friendship for Bob, they had accepted her wholeheartedly. But today she would be alone. And she was not sure that Sybil's friends would be the same warm-hearted matrons whom Bob had presented. Today she would meet the smart young women, the well-poised, brilliant young sophisticates.

She was afraid of people like that. She lacked the self-confidence to meet them successfully. Parties still held a certain terror for her, because she was never sure when she might meet another woman from San Francisco—someone who remembered. A girl does not gather social assurance during a lifetime of hiding from society. Today she must not be afraid.

She took one last personal inventory. The evening before she had had a shampoo and manicure. Her shoes were new, so were her stockings. She was glad it had continued cold; she would not need galoshes.

Her dress, which she had hoped to change, would do. It was a plain black silk, ideal for the office, but glorified for the occasion by a crisp new collar and a pair of good clips. Her hat was new and smart. Her plain black coat she had worn all through the winter, but it was made of good material even though it lacked an abundance of fur, and today it had been brushed within an inch of its life.

As far as grooming went, she felt confident. There was no carelessness to warrant criticism.

Her train arrived in Green Hills at 5:30. Sybil had suggested 5 o'clock, so she was not very late. She started to walk from the station, then suddenly catering to Sybil's sophistication, she decided on a taxi.

Her decision proved a wise one, because Sybil herself was welcoming guests at the door when she drew up. "Joan, my dear!" she greeted effusively. "It's so nice to see you. Do run upstairs, will you? My maid will take your wraps. I shall be waiting here for you." Jennings is mixing cocktails, and I must watch the door. . . . Oh, Marjorie! Glorious! So glad you both could come. . . .

Joan's feet sank into the deep pile of the carpeting as she walked up the stairs. At the landing, a pert little maid met her and ushered her into a boudoir at the left—a veritable stage setting of rose and silver. This must be Sybil's room, she thought, and she caught her breath at the sheer luxury of it. In her simple black office dress, she felt a fitting companion to the maid, and her hands trembled as she reached into her bag for a handkerchief.

Two other young women were freshening their make-up at a vanity table, and they graciously made a place for her, and included her in their irrelevant chatter about the weather. Eventually she went downstairs with them. Sybil met them. She took Joan's arm and drew her forward.

"This is Bob's fiancée, Joan Barrett," she introduced. "Joan, let me present Bess Havens and Lois Steadman. Though you've previously introduced yourselves upstairs, please come, Joan, my dear, the others are all so eager to know you, too."

She speaks, Joan thought, like a person in a play, so charmingly precise, as if she had rehearsed every word carefully. . . . but her eyes remain cold and remote, as if she weren't there at all.

Sybil led her into the blue and ivory living room, and Joan felt a dozen pairs of eyes focused upon her, and 10 times a dozen pairs reflected from so many mirrors. Mechanically she acknowledged Sybil's introductions, praying that she would not be forced to shake hands and betray, by the icy mobility of her own, the inner discomfort which she felt.

These women were to be her friends and neighbors, yet of all the eyes and reflection of eyes which burned into her, there was no pair which sparkled warmth and friendship. They were all Sybil's eyes, a dozen times over, cold and remote and unfriendly, though the lips that matched them smiled and murmured charming phrases. The friendly, fleshy matrons whom Bob had presented were not to be found in this group.

Here were the critics, waiting to tear her apart. Here were the social dictators, soothing her with subtle smiles and velvety speeches as their eyes watched with eager impatience for one slight excuse to cast her from their circle.

Sybil led her to the divan, where she might enjoy the center of the stage.

"We're all so very, very fond of Bob," she explained engagingly, "that we feel we must know you thoroughly."

Joan knew that the words Sybil was thinking were: "That we want to know if you are good enough for him."

"I hope you won't find us too dull, Joan," Sybil chattered on. "Compared with you, we lead such empty lives." Then, in explanation to the others: "Joan, you know, is Uncle John's secretary. He tells me that he couldn't do a thing without her!"

If the words were intended for flattery, the intention was lost. Rather, Sybil had called attention to the difference in their positions, and beneath the sugar coating of her words there was a vague sting.

The others, quick to seize an opportunity, followed up her words in the subsequent small talk. Did it not require years of training for such a position? Or had she started to work when she was very young? Not really? Seventeen? Think of it! Didn't get to college, then? How unfortunate! A good finishing school, however, not even finishing school? Oh, dear! Well, it was just too, too wonderful what a young girl could do for herself these days. . . . of course, if one was that type.

Jennings entered quietly, carrying a tray of cocktails. He walked straight toward Joan, presenting another problem. If she refused, she would be a prude and a bore, a handicap to a man whose business success depended upon his wife's diplomacy in social contacts. If she drank but one, and let its warm stimulation free her of the overpowering tenseness which she felt, her laugh might become one note too shrill and the critics would whisper: "What can you expect from a common stenographer?"

She chose the middle course. Taking one from the proffered tray, she sipped a few drops slowly, then quietly placed the glass on the low coffee table in front of her. Her hand, she noticed happily, no longer trembled.

Conversation did not lag; neither was it pursued along a common ground of understanding. Joan could not be sure whether Sybil's friends were deliberately talking over her head or whether they were just as deliberately parading before each other. They discussed the merits of the various orchestras in Manhattan's smarter night clubs; they raised astonished eyebrows at one note too familiar with the Such-and-Such club. They complimented each other on new gowns, ascertaining in nonchalant but determined fashion the source of each gown's origin. They praised Sybil's cocktails, at the same time offering suggestions from their own infallible knowledge of liquors. They chatted of mutual friends in Biarritz, Palm Beach and Nassau, presenting varied and elaborate excuses for their own deplorable presence in New York in January.

"By the way," someone interrupted, "has Barbara Downs left for Florida yet?"

"No," Sybil replied. "I talked to her yesterday. They plan to leave the beginning of next week. Incidentally, I asked her to stop in this afternoon."

"Is she coming?"

"A little later, perhaps. Her cousin is visiting her and they had tickets for a matinee this afternoon."

"It's almost six now. . . ."

Sybil looked at her tiny jeweled watch. "So it is. . . . well, perhaps they're staying in town. . . . The doorbell sounded as she spoke. . . . unless this is now. Yes, of course!"

She rose and went toward the door. As she brushed past the low coffee table, Joan picked up her glass, lest it be knocked over by the swish of Sybil's skirt. A moment later, she heard Sybil greet the late arrivals: "Hello, Barbara. And Dorothy. I'm so glad you could get here. We've just been talking about you."

A moment later, she brought them in to meet Joan.

"May I present Barbara Downs? This is Joan Barrett, Bob's fiancée. And Barbara's cousin, Dorothy Starke, from Seattle."

The cocktail glass dropped from Joan's suddenly lifeless hand, shattered into bits on the glass-topped table. She raised horror-stricken eyes to meet the same Dorothy Starke, from Seattle, whom she had last seen seven years before, at a "sweet sixteen" party. . . .

Federated Club Women Hold Biggest Meeting In History

Report Reveals 374 New Groups Formed

Next Important Session Will Be Triennial Convention At Kansas City In May

"If the greatest value of women's clubs, both to their members and to the community, is to be realized, acute and persistent attention must be given to standards." That is the sincere belief of prominent club women. They have been convinced for a long time that unless high standards motivate club action, goals for which they are organized will fall far short. To stand alone for the high and unselfish purpose is the motif of the Federated Women's clubs throughout the length and breadth of the land.

Ideals of the Louisiana federation are for the betterment of humanity.

Club programs were formed in the beginning that women might have an outlet for expression. The work of many women's organizations is strengthened by high principles and honesty of purpose as manifested in this city where every federated club is accomplishing splendid work.

The council meeting of the General Federation of Women's clubs held recently in Tulsa, Okla., the home of the president, Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, was the largest in the history of the organization. There were over 1,800 registered delegates. There has been an increase of 374 new clubs during the past year, representing a net gain of 39,668 individual members.

Such facts and figures speak for themselves and constitute indisputable evidence that women's clubs are both a going and a growing institution.

Because of the great affection and esteem in which the president, Mrs. Lawson, is held by her townspeople, the social courtesies were notably numerous and cordial.

"Education for Living," the keynote of the administration, was developed by the department chairmen and such guest speakers as Joseph B. Keenan, assistant to the attorney general of the United States; Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana; Mrs. T. Grafton Abbott, child specialist of the Massachusetts state department of public health; Dr. Marcus E. Lindsay, pastor of Grace Presbyterian church in Wichita, Kas.; George E. Lackey of Detroit, representing the Massachusetts Life Insurance company; Grace Elmore Gibson, prominent Tulsa attorney; Mr. Maxwell Halsey, assistant director of the Harvard bureau of street traffic research; Katherine F. Lenroot, chief, children's bureau, United States department of labor.

Although the federation's major work is done under nine departments, the names of which do not change, the programs are flexible and under the guidance of able chairmen. Current problems are brought to the federation as soon as they become national in scope and interest, hence a widely diversified program is constantly available, each department head outlining her plans at the council meeting.

The next meeting of great importance in the General Federation of Women's clubs will be the triennial convention to be held in Kansas City next May. At this time, officers will be elected. The following candidates were endorsed at the council meeting:

President, Mrs. Sallie Orr Dunbar, Portland, Ore., now first vice-president.

First vice-president, Mrs. Walter W. Seymour, Chicago, now second vice-president; Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, Baltimore, now chairman, department of education; Mrs. William Dick Spornberg, Port Chester, N. Y., now chairman, department of legislation.

Second vice-president, Mrs. George W. Adams, Andalusia, Ala., past director for Alabama; Mrs. T. G. Bogert, Akron, Colo., now chairman, division of natural resources; Mrs. LaFell Dickinson, Keene, N. H., now treasurer; Mrs. John S. Harvey, Huntington, W. Va., now recording secretary.

Recording secretary, Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, Athens, Ga., now director for Georgia; Mrs. Jefferson D. Atwood, Roswell, N. M., now chairman, department of American citizenship.

Treasurer, Mrs. J. L. Buck, Richmond, Va., now chairman for the budget committee.

Each candidate was presented by her state federation president to the president of the general federation, who wished them well and presented them to the audience.

Mrs. John L. Whitehurst was a guest of honor at the annual state convention of the Louisiana federation held in Shreveport last fall and a principal speaker, her topic being, "Americanism, the Only Ism for Americans." She was received with acclaim, having a vital message, and the power of speech.

Federated Club Women Hold Biggest Meeting In History

Report Reveals 374 New Groups Formed

Next Important Session Will Be Triennial Convention At Kansas City In May

"If the greatest value of women's clubs, both to their members and to the community, is to be realized, acute and persistent attention must be given to standards." That is the sincere belief of prominent club women. They have been convinced for a long time that unless high standards motivate club action, goals for which they are organized will fall far short. To stand alone for the high and unselfish purpose is the motif of the Federated Women's clubs throughout the length and breadth of the land.

Ideals of the Louisiana federation are for the betterment of humanity. Club programs were formed in the beginning that women might have an outlet for expression. The work of many women's organizations is strengthened by high principles, and honesty of purpose as manifested in this city where every federated club is accomplishing splendid work.

The council meeting of the General Federation of Women's clubs held recently in Tulsa, Okla., was presided over by Mrs. Robert Campbell Lawson, was the largest in the history of the organization. There were over 1,800 registered delegates. There has been an increase of 374 new clubs during the past year, representing a net gain of 30,668 individual members.

Such facts and figures speak for themselves and constitute indisputable evidence that women's clubs are both a going and a growing institution.

Because of the great affection and esteem in which the president, Mrs. Lawson, is held by her thousands of club members, the social courtesies were notably numerous and cordial.

"Education for Living," the keynote of the administration, was developed by the department chairmen and such guest speakers as Joseph B. Keenan, assistant to the attorney general of the United States; Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana; Mrs. T. Grafton Abbott, child specialist of the Massachusetts state department of public health; Dr. Marcus E. Lindsay, pastor of Grace Presbyterian church in Wichita, Kas.; George E. Lackey of Detroit, representing the Massachusetts Life Insurance company; George Elmore Gibson, prominent Tulsa attorney; Mr. Maxwell Halsey, assistant director of the Harvard bureau of street traffic research; Katherine F. Lenroot, chief, children's bureau, United States department of labor.

Although the federation's major work is done under nine departments, the names of which do not change, the programs are flexible and under the guidance of able chairmen. Current problems are brought to the federation as soon as they become national in scope and interest, hence a widely diversified program is com-stantly available, each department head outlining her plans at the council meeting.

The next meeting of great importance in the General Federation of Women's clubs will be the triennial convention to be held in Kansas City next May. At this time, officers will be elected. The following candidates were endorsed at the council meeting:

President, Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, Portland, Ore., now first vice-president.

AMERICAN ENTERPRISE

(From an address by Virgil Jordan, president of the National Industrial Conference Board.)

Enterprise is the vital principle underlying the accomplishment and the character of the American people. It has made America the strongest and most prosperous nation the world has ever known, in any terms of comparison you may choose. The expression of the enterprise principle in its life, work and political institutions has made America an unparalleled adventure in human progress under freedom. What is it, and what does it demand of us?

In its spiritual aspect, the enterprise principle is a recognition of the supreme importance of the individual human personality, whose energies are the source of all creative power, whose accomplishments are the standard of all values, whose development is the end and object of all social activities and institutions. In its material aspect, it expresses itself in an organization of life and labor which most fully releases the creative powers of the individual human spirit for the benefit of all.

The conditions of its effective operation are more rigid and uncompromising than the decrees of any human dictator, for it is governed by the unwritten and immutable laws of life and nature. It requires among a people and their leaders a firm grasp of the basic facts of human existence and human character. It requires that they understand that their prosperity or even their survival is inescapably insecure and uncertain, and that their progress implies everlasting instability and change. It requires a people who understand that their prosperity and security demands incessant labor, and that its degree depends upon the amount of work they do. It requires a people who understand that individuals inevitably differ in intelligence, will, capacity and accomplishment, that progress implies endless differentiation, and that uniformity means stagnation and decay.

The enterprise principle and the enterprise organization not only require realistic comprehension of these facts, they require that every citizen shall be free to cope with them as best he can, on his own initiative, or in voluntary cooperation with others, and that he shall be responsible for the consequences of what he does or does not do in dealing with them. Personal freedom and responsibility are the twin moral roots of the enterprise principle. The organization of life and work in which it is expressed is the tree that has sprung from those roots. Prosperity and progress are its fruits.

Jonesboro Makes Unusual Progress In Recent Years

Financial Status Excellent; Services To Taxpayers Expanded

By H. L. McKnight

JONESBORO, La., June 12.—(Special)—Students of current history are certain that the most common defect in government is the tendency to incur debts beyond the ability of the taxpayers to pay. Added to this all too common criticism is the charge that even after incurring unreasonable indebtedness by borrowing in its various forms, many governmental agencies fail to render adequate and needed service to the taxpayers.

Without attempting to pass on the truth of these two types of criticism, it can be stated here that the city of Jonesboro is entirely free from either of these two faults.

Nestling among the rolling hills of north Louisiana, Jonesboro is not an old city as age goes with many Louisiana communities. It was the coming of the Rock Island railroad, or, rather, to be exact, its parent transportation entity, the "Arkansas Southern," in 1890, that moved the center of human activities in Jackson parish from the then parish site, Vernon, to the present location, Jonesboro. Today, Vernon is hardly more than a mound and a memory, secure in the enviable place it won over a long period of pioneer history and dear to many of its one-time citizens who still love to spin interesting yarns about "the good old days when Vernon was the capital of the surrounding country."

But if Vernon has been forced by some immutable law of economics or chance to be content with day dreams, her worthy and ambitious successor, Jonesboro, refuses to dream her days away. For Jonesboro is an "up-and-coming" little city of 3,500 progressive citizens.

Credit Was Nil

But the purpose of this story is not to deal with the past, but to state some of the recent facts about how the city is getting on as cities "get on," and to give due credit for progress made over the past several years to the group of men who are now in charge of the city government and who are largely responsible for the favorable position the city occupies.

Progress is not always in a direct line. Even in the best managed municipalities, "zig-zagging" sometimes happens. Time was when the city of Jonesboro could buy for cash only. Today she enjoys unlimited credit. Employees of the city tell of the time when a check on the city treasury was not acceptable in the commercial world. Supply dealers would not ship the city orders "C. O. D." It was necessary to send either a cashier's check or a postoffice money order, if the goods needed were to be shipped.

The present superintendent of the power plant worked six months before receiving any money for his services. To quote his exact words: "If it had not been for personal friends who helped in me and my willingness to pay my debts, I could not have started the work I have now been doing for the city for these 18 years. Business friends sold me food and clothing on credit until the city's finances were placed on a sound footing."

Services Expanded

But it is not merely that a body of men, elected to manage the city's affairs, has pulled the city out of the slough of debt. Merely to recover the city's credit and place its business on a cash basis would not be a great achievement. But to change things from financial chaos to sound business and, at the same time, to greatly expand the services the city renders its people—that is an unusual achievement.

Within the period covered by the present city council, Jonesboro has extended every agency of service the city renders. A sewer project costing $175,000 is nearing completion. The city's high-power lines now radiate for miles out in every direction. Stated in exact figures, these lines, rendering service to rural dwellers, cover 22 miles. The cost of these power lines, carrying current generated by Jonesboro's new power units to farmers and other rural dwellers, will be borne by the customers who buy the power, and will enable the city to pay for the equipment and necessary machinery of the new service out of profits it brings the city.

In 1935, the light and water plant of Jonesboro inventoried $166,882. In 1936, this same power and water plant inventoried $220,123. For the 1935 period, this investment of the city showed a net profit of $19,354. For the year 1936, the net profit was $26,318.

Many New Customers

New customers for both light and water are appearing each month in the books of the city, an evidence that speaks louder than mere figures as to the fairness of the rate charged for such services.

But probably the most outstanding fact about the present city government of Jonesboro is that the entire salary account of city officials stands at $3,883.31 for the past year. And this modest sum goes to pay the salary of the mayor, the marshal, the night marshal, the bookkeeper, the city's insurance premiums and such special officers as were needed for special occasions during the past year. Much has been said by John Public but little done by those he elects to office or even three offices into one to save the taxpayer's money. Jonesboro declares her faith in that philosophy by actually doing it.

Jonesboro has no fire chief. That office is filled by the superintendent of the power plant, assisted by two men who help operate the plant. Other economies also are put into effect by the mayor and his council.

Jonesboro's energetic, efficient mayor, A. C. Holly, better known by his associates as "Steve" Holly, has been a citizen of the community for 25 years. Born in Haynesville, "Steve" Holly "emigrated" to Columbia county, Ark., when a boy and grew to manhood in that section. His connection with the city government of Jonesboro has continued over a period of sixteen years, but not consecutive years. He was named to his present position without solicitation on his part. He is making an enviable record as the directing head of the city government.

Progressive Officials

Jonesboro's city council is composed of young men and men who propose to stay young by keeping in step with the progress of the times.

The personnel of the council follows:

Wilbur McDonald, bank cashier and member of a well-known north Louisiana pioneer family, is putting into the city's business the same business ability and foresight that has characterized his banking record. He serves as a member of the power plant commission for the city.

Ralph Wheat, "native son" of Jackson parish, is chairman of the street committee. Ralph Wheat knows the record of practically every successful athlete of the present day. But he also knows how to build and maintain good streets at a minimum cost.

G. S. Wyatt, familiarly known as "Dude" Wyatt, serves the C. R. I. and P. railroad as local agent at Jonesboro. "Dude" Wyatt spent several years with the old International and Great Northern railroad as agent and clerk in a number of east Texas towns. But railroading is not all "Dude" Wyatt knows. He knows about Jonesboro's light and power plant; he is a member of the power plant commission of the city.

B. B. Bass, member of the street commission for the city, was born at Eros, Jackson parish. He likes Jackson parish so well that he refuses to live elsewhere.

Travis Pardue, chairman of the sanitary commission for the city, is a live young business man who originated somewhere in Claiborne parish but selected Jackson parish and Jonesboro to make his fortune.

Dane Tolar, superintendent of the power plant, came to manhood somewhere down about Wyatt or Dodson or some other point in Jackson parish, but early in life showed signs of "going places and doing things," so he came to the parish capital where for 17 years he has served in the capacities of superintendent of the power plant, fire chief and inspector of the sewerage system, power lines and anything else requiring inspection for the city.

Emmett Jeffries, "discovered America" in Hopkins county, Tex., but selected Louisiana as the better state of the two. "Doc" Jeffries "keeps the records straight" for the city by collecting the bills, paying the bills and helping to keep the bills down. He has lived at Jonesboro for 35 years and shows no sign of wanting to get away.

Jonesboro is enjoying a steady, healthy growth, both in population and in property values.

And the civic "I. Q." of the growing population is constantly rising higher.

INDUSTRIAL AND BUSINESS REVIEW OF THE TWIN CITIES NORTH LOUISIANA'S COMMERCIAL CENTER

STORES OBSERVE 30TH BIRTHDAY

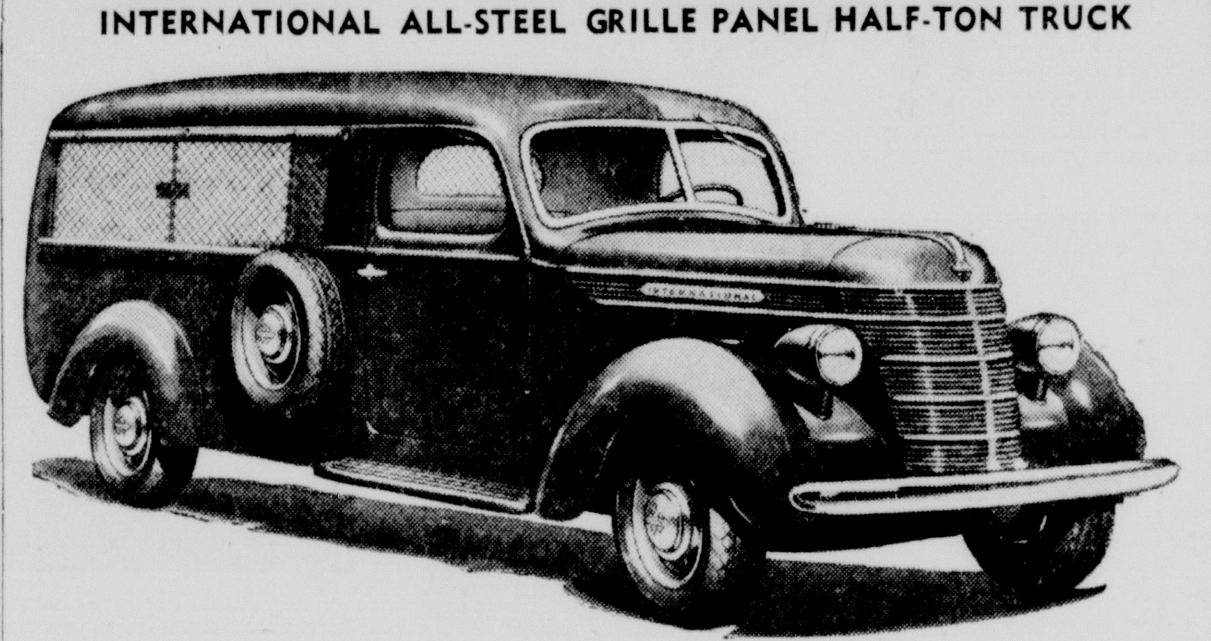

First Walgreen Drug Store, And An Idea, Originated In 1907

The first Walgreen drug store, at Cottage Grove and Bowen avenues in Chicago, becomes a center of interest this month which marks the company's thirtieth anniversary.

It was here that Charles R. Walgreen, a young pharmacist just returned from the Spanish-American war, first became a drug store owner. The store, when he bought it, had nothing to recommend it except a favorable location. It differed little if any from other neighborhood drug stores, yet Mr. Walgreen was determined not to let it remain so.

Soon he began a series of improvements revolutionary in their day. Today the same and better improvements are accepted as a Walgreen standard by patrons of Walgreen drug stores in thirty-six states.

One of his first acts as a drug store operator was to let in more air and light. Then came wider aisles, illuminated show cases, all-metal soda

The truck shown above is one of the 26 new models introduced by the International Harvester company this year. The lines of this attractive body blend with the graceful contours of grille, hood, cowl and cab. It is a light-duty transportation unit of distinctive appearance and maximum utility.

STUDEBAKER HAS 'LIVE' AGENCIES

Aggressive Dealers Making Impressive Record With Sensational 1937 Models

Studebaker completed in 1936 an unusually successful year. While the retail deliveries of all passenger cars in the industry made a gain of 24.9 per cent in the first eight months of 1936 over 1935, Studebaker's gain was 53.8 per cent. The figures speak for themselves. They tell the story of a splendid product aggressively merchandised by a strong group of dealers. And an even more sensational record will be made in 1937.

The greatest single factor in Studebaker's success in 1936 is, of course, an outstanding product. The second most important factor is the strength of the present Studebaker dealer organization. The Studebaker corporation has attracted to itself dealers of a very special type. They are those who wish to be independent business men free to control and operate their own businesses without dictation or undue supervision from the factory. They are dealers who do not like arbitrary shipments nor positive instructions. Consequently, they are dealers who enjoy being with Studebaker because the Studebaker factory policy is in accord with their own ideas as to the best way in which to operate a dealership.

While Studebaker has pioneered all forms of factory assistance for dealers, it has always offered factory material to the dealers but has never compelled them to take it. The Studebaker dealer runs his own show. He buys cars when he wants them. He usually uses the Studebaker accounting system and other dealer helps, but not always.

The factory gives to each dealer an outstanding product and territory in which to sell it. It expects the dealer to get a satisfactory volume. That our dealers like this policy is shown by the fact that more than 600 of them have been selling Studebaker cars for over 10 years.

While 1936 was a splendid year for Studebaker the prospects for 1937 are even brighter. The 1937 cars have enjoyed an unusual public approval since their introduction last September. 1937 will show even a greater gain over the splendid increase in 1936 than 1936 showed over 1935. When the year is over, the figures, of course, will tell their own story, but Studebaker is confident that the 1937 record will be one of which they may well be proud.

PRaise DISPLAY AT LOCAL STORE

Durrett's Williamsburg Galleries Inspired by Spirit Of Old Virginia

Persons who have visited the Williamsburg galleries on the third floor of the Durrett Hardware and Furniture company, 117 St. John street, during the past few weeks are unanimous in their praise of the exactitude with which the galleries have been made to conform to the colonial period of the eighteenth century.

Visitors have been taken back to the golden age of gracious hospitality as if inspired by the spirit of old Williamsburg in Virginia, now the center of attraction as a historic shrine.

Pass through the entrance surrounded by the pineapple of hospitality and you can imagine yourself in one of the old homes of Williamsburg when Virginia was still a colony. Pause in the Elizabeth Carter alcove, see the Wren room, visit the Gloucester and the Dixon rooms, linger in the Berkeley and Raleigh dining rooms and savor the charm of the Alice Page and Susanna Allen bedrooms.

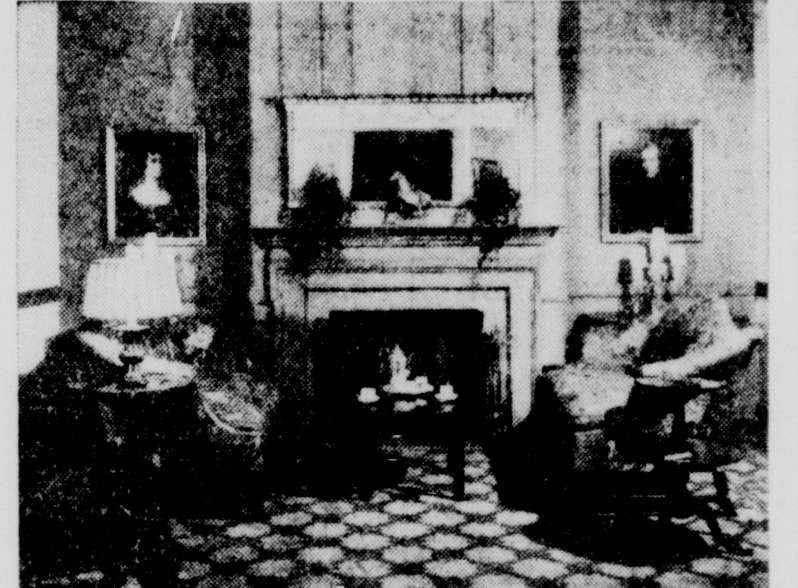

Here are rooms inspired by restored rooms of Williamsburg, all adapted to modern living. The furniture, made of finest Honduras mahogany by one of America's leading manufacturers in North Carolina, is lovingly modeled after authentic eighteenth century designs, but with primary emphasis on comfort, the one thing lacking in that era. Because design and decoration of the period when Williamsburg was Virginia's capital, previous to 1779, were intrinsically good, they are good today, in perfect taste and with that aura of romance toward which the modern mind instinctively turns with a sense of reverence.

You will gain an entirely new conception of life in the colonies. You will see deep, intense colors on the walls. You will sense instantly an air of formality and elegance, of comfort and luxury, for they knew how to live, those gallant Virginians, and you will carry away with you a longing for the spacious, leisurely atmosphere conveyed by the furnishing and decoration of that most gracious era.

Everything in the Williamsburg galleries is for sale, at a moderate price considering the superb quality and every piece will fit unerringly into homes of today.

A "super-double hybrid" nasturtium which frequently grows as many as 65 petals has been developed.

WREN ROOM AT DURRETT'S

SILVERWARE REAL GIFT FOR BRIDES

Fine Selection Of Sterling Silver

Of the many gifts which a bride may prize, perhaps none gives greater pleasure than silverware, a gift which adds charm and dignity to the home and marks the possessor as a person of good taste and refinement.

S. J. Rivoire and Son, located at 322 DeSard street, have just the thing in silverware for the June bride. This store is the oldest in Monroe, having been established in 1891, and operated continuously by S. J. Rivoire, expert jeweler, goldsmith and silversmith. It prides itself on having supplied wedding gifts such as fine diamond rings and silverware to brides of the past three and four generations in Monroe. The store has established a reputation among jewelers of north Louisiana as one of the most conservative and outstanding jewelry stores, keeping in stock only the very best in jewelry at prices that are exceptionally low.

Mr. Rivoire, who learned his craft in France, from which country he journeyed to New Orleans, where he was associated with one of the finest jewelry stores in that city, has won the confidence and esteem of the best families in the city who have continuously purchased their requirements at his store.

S. J. Rivoire and Son have select stocks of Towle, Gorham and International sterling silverware, every piece a work of art and most suitable to grace the home of the June bride. Possession of sterling silverware from Rivoire's will provoke a sense of justifiable pride. The "little by little" plan has also been instituted by the S. J. Rivoire and Son jewelry store, designed to assist the bride in acquiring her silverware, a piece at a time, and conforming to one pattern.

Friends of the June bride are invited to visit the S. J. Rivoire and Son jewelry where a large assortment of wedding gifts are on display including silver bowls, bread trays, mantle clocks, tea and coffee sets, sugar and cream bowls and many other handsome and attractive gifts, all of which are very reasonably priced.

More Than 50 Per Cent Of Automobiles Equipped With Delco Batteries

More than 50 per cent of all automobiles manufactured in the United States last year were equipped with Delco batteries, according to a statement made by G. F. Becker, general manager of United Electric Service, Inc., 308 North Third street.

Today's lower prices and longer service make Delco batteries a better value than ever before. It is for this reason that automobile manufacturers in this country equip their product with Delco batteries," Mr. Becker declared.

Delco batteries are manufactured of the finest materials and the plant is capable of producing 12,000 batteries

CARBON COMPANIES Our companies whose names you see below, have contributed our part to the growth and progress of Monroe and Ouachita Parish. Southern Carbon Company—Columbian Gasoline Corp. Southern Gas Line, Inc.—Pineville Gas Co. SUBSIDIARIES OF COLUMBIAN CARBON COMPANY Monroe, Louisiana	CHURCHES ST. MATTHEW'S CATHOLIC CHURCH FATHER M. F. VANDEGAER, Pastor "Gladly cooperating for the spiritual and material betterment of Monroe and Ouachita Parish." Rectory, 309 Grammont St. Phone 976	AMERICAN ENTERPRISE (From an address by Virgil Jordan, president of the National Industrial Conference Board.) Enterprise is the vital principle underlying the accomplishment and the character of the American people. It has made America the strongest and most prosperous nation the world has ever known, in any terms of comparison you may choose. The expression of the enterprise principle in its life, work and political institutions has made America an unparalleled adventure in human progress under freedom. What is it, and what does it demand of us? In its spiritual aspect, the enterprise principle is a recognition of the supreme importance of the individual human personality, whose energies are the source of all creative power, whose accomplishments are the standard of all values, whose development is the end and object of all social activities and institutions. In its material aspect, it expresses itself in an organization of life and labor which most fully releases the creative powers of the individual human spirit for the benefit of all. The conditions of its effective operation are more rigid and uncompromising than the decrees of any human dictator, for it is governed by the unwritten and immutable laws of life and nature. It requires among a people and their leaders a firm grasp of the basic facts of human existence and human character. It requires that they understand that their prosperity or even their survival is inescapably insecure and uncertain, and that their progress implies everlasting instability and change. It requires a people who understand that their prosperity and security demands incessant labor, and that its degree depends upon the amount of work they do. It requires a people who understand that individuals inevitably differ in intelligence, will, capacity and accomplishment, that progress implies endless differentiation, and that uniformity means stagnation and decay. The enterprise principle and the enterprise organization not only require realistic comprehension of these facts, they require that every citizen shall be free to cope with them as best he can, on his own initiative, or in voluntary cooperation with others, and that he shall be responsible for the consequences of what he does or does not do in dealing with them. Personal freedom and responsibility are the twin moral roots of the enterprise principle. The organization of life and work in which it is expressed is the tree that has sprung from these roots. Prosperity and progress are its fruits. LOW COST HOME MAY BE BOUGHT WITHIN DECADE

Slight Increased Payments
Complete Transaction In Ten Years

WASHINGTON, D. C.—While the low-priced homes used as illustrative cases by the Federal Housing administration in a recently published booklet may be constructed in a price range of between $1,250 and $2,500, exclusive of land cost, and may be financed over periods up to 20 years, these same homes may be purchased under the insured mortgage system in a period of 10 years with very little additional strain on the average pocketbook, it was revealed today. Monthly payments for the shorter period are increased by only $5 to $8.

In a booklet entitled "Principles of Planning Small Houses," now available to the public, five examples of low-priced homes were given by the housing administration, designated as houses "A, B, C, D, and E."

Payments Compared
Statistical experts of the housing administration have tabulated the following comparisons of financing these houses under the insured mortgage system for 10-year and 20-year periods:

House A: Value of property, $1,600 (house, $1,200; land, $400). Value of loan, $1,280. Term of loan, 10 years. Initial charges, $56.93. Monthly payments, $18.82.

House A (same conditions as above): Term of loan, 20 years. Initial charges, $56.93. Monthly payments, $13.71.

From this tabulation it may be seen, according to the housing administration, that House A may be built and paid for in full within 10 years for the additional monthly outlay of only $5.11.

Other Houses
Similarly, House B: Value of property, $2,150 (house, $1,650; land, $500). Value of loan, $1,720. Term of loan, 10 years. Initial charges, $59.32; monthly payments, $24.93.

House B (same conditions as above): Term of loan, 20 years. Initial charges, $59.32. Monthly payments, $18.07.

Thus, House B may be completely paid for in 10 years for the additional monthly outlay of only $6.86.

In a like fashion Houses C and D (value of property, $2,250; house, $1,750; land, $500) may be purchased in 10 years for an additional monthly payment of only $7.18, as compared with payments over a 20-year period.

House E (value of property, $2,700; house, $2,100; land, $600) may be purchased in its entirety within 10 years for monthly payments running only $8.62 more per month than the payments under a 20-year plan.

Charges Included
Monthly payments include amortization of principal and interest payment, average monthly service charge, housing administration insurance premium, monthly taxes, and monthly hazard insurance. In the tabulation

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

THE HOUSE BUILT IN 7 HOURS AND 45 MINUTES—In Port Arthur, Tex., the "Help Thy Neighbor's" spirit prevails in a most admirable form. Recently a member of the Port Arthur Building Trades council died and his widow was left without a home. The men of the town decided to provide her with one immediately. On Saturday, April 24th, nearly 100 of them got together and went to work en masse. For 7 hours and 45 minutes they scurried back and forth, busy as bees. At the end of that short time the widow walked into her new home, complete in every detail. And during their "spare time," "Believe It or Not," they built a one-car garage at the rear of the house.

LOYAL TO THE FLAG—A 35-foot flagpole stands in the front yard of Edward Meighan's home in Memphis, Tenn. Every day for more than 45 years the American flag has been raised and lowered with appropriate ceremonies. Although never serving the flag as a soldier or sailor, Mr. Meighan began this observance when he became 21 years of age and has continued it, without interruption, ever since.

made by the housing administration the monthly water rent, included in the payments, was estimated at $1.

Initial charges were based on those prevailing in the District of Columbia. Full particulars concerning financing of low-priced homes under the insured mortgage system are available at any office of the Federal Housing administration.

STRONG FLOOR BEAMS NEEDED IN BATHROOM

The heaviest load per square foot of the entire house is usually carried by the bathroom floor, the reason for this being the weight of the materials used in the room—concrete, tile, and fixtures. Unfortunately, this is one part of the building in which the floor beams are usually weakened by careless cutting for the installation of pipes. It is possible to avoid this error by proper framing for the pipes, and this extra support should be provided to avoid settlement cracks in the tile, between the tile and the built-in tub, and on the ceiling below.

Homes may be financed through the insured mortgage system of the Federal Housing administration.

GRADED LUMBER ASSURES QUALITY

Dependable lumber is essential in providing a substantial framework for a dwelling. Lumber is graded in accordance with quality, the quality being determined by the number of knots, cracks, sap pockets, and other imperfections. The fewer of these the better the grade.

Dryness is essential in lumber, as the less moisture it contains the less the amount of shrinkage after the building is thoroughly dried out.

Questions And Answers

Q—After a heavy rain I notice a damp spot on the wall in the corner of one of my rooms. The walls are of solid brick. Can you tell me the cause and suggest a cure?

A—Undoubtedly the brick work at that corner needs pointing up. Possibly there is a down spout at that corner which may leak, causing an excessive amount of water to run down the brick. Point the bricks carefully and replace the down spout if necessary.

Q—What is the best way to store my cleaning materials?

A—Assign some closet or portion of a closet to storage of all brooms, mops, and cleaning materials. Set up two or three shallow shelves, placing the lowest one four and a half feet above the floor. Have a hook strip just under the lowest shelf and have a strong cord or wire loop on each broom and mop and hang them on hooks. The shelves should be just deep enough to hold one row of cans and bottles.

Q—The drain from my ice box gets clogged frequently. Can you tell me how to fix it?

A—Undoubtedly the pipe is too small. It should be at least an inch and a half in diameter. It should have no sharp bends or traps in it. It should empty either directly outdoors or into a catch basin or dry well. It should not be connected with the sanitary sewer.

Q—Is it sanitary to build an interior toilet room?

A—Yes; if it is properly installed and ventilated. The main consideration is positive ventilation. For this purpose a good-sized vent duct must be carried to the outer air. A fan should be installed or the duct placed next to a chimney that will heat it and start the air circulating if good ventilation is desired.

VARIED ROOF TYPES FOR MODERN HOMES

The roof is a very important part of the house both in regard to architectural beauty and to maintenance expense. There are many types of roofing, ranging from wood shingle to heavy tile.

Certain types of shingles offer many years of usage and require virtually no upkeep as regards painting or repairs. Some of these materials are available for exterior walls. A house with a flat roof should be constructed so that it may be used, if desired, as a sun deck or roof terrace. The Federal Housing administration program provides for the insurance of home mortgages.

STEPS FOR HOME OWNER OFFERED BY FHA OFFICIAL

Deputy Administrator Urges
Caution In Modernization
Investments

Suggesting that the usual business precautions should be taken when making an investment as important as property repairs or improvements, L. R. Gignilliat, Jr., deputy administrator of the federal housing administration, recently outlined a number of steps that home owners and others may take to serve their interests and obtain the best values available.

"When planning any modernization job it is advisable to select carefully the dealer, contractor, or builder who will supply the material and do the work, to get two or more estimates before agreeing on prices, and to put the transaction on a strictly business basis with written specifications and conditions," said Mr. Gignilliat, who is in charge of the modernization program under Title I of the national housing act.

Eleven Points
Mr. Gignilliat suggested eleven points to be borne in mind when ordering repairs, alterations, and other property improvements. These are:

1. Specify completely, in writing, the work to be done. Outline the exact work to be accomplished, the methods to be used, and a time limit for starting and completing the job. Stipulate that all laws and regulations are to be complied with, and that the work is to be inspected and found satisfactory by the purchaser before the job will be considered completed.

2. Specify completely, in writing, the materials and equipment to be used. State all details.

3. Specify a price to include all work and materials and miscellaneous items, such as permits, etc.

4. See that the work and materials specified are furnished. Stipulate that no changes, substitutions, or extra charges will be allowed without the prior written consent of the buyer.

5. Provide that payment will be made only when the work has been satisfactorily completed or after certain stages of it have been satisfactorily completed in accordance with the price set. Require that proper protection be given to the buyer against mechanics' liens. Have a definite understanding as to guaranty of satisfactory performance after payment has been made.

6. Be careful not to sign completion or installation certificate prior to the actual and satisfactory completion of the job.

7. Deal only with reputable contractors, dealers, etc. Investigate the length of time they have been in business and check with people for whom they have done work.

8. Consult the better business bureau or local chamber of commerce if there is any question as to the integrity of the dealer or contractor.

9. If possible, call upon the dealer or contractor at his place of business to note the general appearance of his responsibility and permanence.

10. Secure two or more bids so as to obtain the lowest cash price consistent with quality. Generally a modification of loan for the full amount of the job. Hence the dealer or contractor is paid in full as soon as he completes his part of the transaction. For this reason he should figure his price on a cash basis.

11. If the job warrants it, employ capable architectural or engineering services.

Does Not Intervene
Mr. Gignilliat pointed out that the regulations governing loans insured under Title I of the national housing act do not provide for intervention by the Federal Housing administration in disputes between the borrower and the dealer as to quality of workmanship and other matters of like nature, and that the borrower is not relieved of his obligation to repay the loan when such disputes occur. Proper care exercised beforehand will largely prevent dissatisfaction or misunderstandings.

FHA IS PERMANENT

The national housing act does not expire next April or next July as some seem to think. The act is permanent legislation, and the Federal Housing administration is a permanent governmental agency. The modernization credit plan expires April 1, 1937. Treasury guarantees of housing administration insurance fund debentures continues until July 1939, but insurance of home mortgages continues with—fund that now totals $15,000,000. This fund is increasing at the rate of $500,000 each month.

NEW FASHIONS FOR MODERN KITCHENS

Modern kitchens are and should be totally unlike old kitchens. They should possess a new and higher type of cleanliness, compactness, airiness, sanitation, beauty and convenience.

The modern kitchen reflects more progress than any room in the house. Most of the equipment used therein has passed through a great change in size, appearance, utility, finish, convenience, and cost of operation. Efficient and adequate equipment is checked during investigation by examiners of homes to be financed with insured mortgages.

CHURCHES

GRACE EPISCOPAL CHURCH

North Fourth and Glenmar Streets
Edward Farren Hayward, Rector

Services for the third Sunday after Trinity are as follows: The Holy Eucharist will be celebrated at 7:30 a.m.; church school will meet at 9:30 a.m.; morning prayer and sermon at 11 a.m. In the collect for this day, we entreat God, as the author of our good desires, to hear the prayers we offer, and to comfort and defend us accordingly. The Epistle shows the disposition of the heart and mind with which the prayers should be made. While in Holy Gospel we learn that Christ was once reproached for receiving sinners, and allowing them to eat with Him. He shows, to our unspeakable comfort, that sinners are the subjects of His redeeming love; and if we are sinners, we have a claim on His love, because He is the Saviour of sinners. The church is opened daily from 7:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. Come in, rest, pray, give thanks, meditate.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

L. T. Hastings, Pastor
D. C. Black, Director of Music and Education

The pastor will occupy the pulpit both morning and evening. The first part of the morning service will be devoted to praise and thanksgiving to God for His goodness in connection with the canvass of our membership for cash and pledges for the building fund. The campaign has been a success, though there are many more members to be seen. Just as the pastor began writing this announcement, Mr. R. C. Stokes, chairman of the finance committee, phoned and said final arrangements had been made and the building committee was drawing up the contract. That means that in a few days at most our ears will hear the sweet music of the saw and hammer. We take this means of thanking Mr. Stokes and his efficient committee, composed of himself as chairman, L. W. Allen, Frank Reitzel, Roy Cole and D. C. Black, together with the large group that went out and secured the pledges. We also want to thank our loyal and faithful members for the fine way in which they have cooperated to make the campaign a success. Many who are not members have also signified their interest in the building by pledging definite amounts. The building committee, composed of L. B. Pettit, chairman, E. H. Murrell and R. M. Drew, comes in for its share of thanks. This first week of the vacation Bible school has been a success from every standpoint. The parents and friends of the children are invited to attend the commencement services next Friday night. We are looking for a record attendance in Sunday school and B. T. U. "The World's Greatest Christian's Supreme Aim Explained," and "The Motive Test" are the subjects of our meditations. They deal with the background of the Apostle Paul's controlling passion and the unseen power prompting acts. Since the Ambassador of Heaven to the Gentiles was a college man, created with an intelligence never surpassed, he must have reasons for declaring: "For me to live is Christ." What were they? Are these facts yet operative? "The Motive Test" has to do with the acceptable plan of alms, prayer and fasting. You are urged to attend the Sabbath school. If this is your church, you are obligated before God and man to support the teaching of Holy Scripture. With your interest, the attendance will be most gratifying. Today is the time. The Bible is the final source of authority in matters of religion. If this be true, how necessary that it be studied.

URANIA CCC CAMP TO BE ABANDONED

JENA, La., June 12.—(Special)—According to advices received from Washington, D. C., the Urania forest camp, located on Castor creek, near Olla, and better known as CCC camp P-58, Company 1492, will be abandoned about July 1.

The Urania camp was among the first to be started in Louisiana and is situated almost in the center of the vast Urania reforestation project, said to be the largest pine reforestation project in the United States. The camp site of the northeast Louisiana Baptist encampment was rented in 1933 by the government for the establishment of camp P-58, and the work accomplished by this camp has attracted very favorable attention, it is said. Federal officials are reported as stating that the work of the Urania camp has been completed. The Urania forest project, in which is located the Yale university camp site, where each year the seniors from that university spend 10 weeks of study, has been recognized by Louisiana State university, North Carolina, Alabama, and other forestry departments and has been studied by eminent forestry experts from every section of the country. It was begun over 30 years ago by the late Henry E. Hardtger, often referred to as the "daddy" of reforestation of the United States.

LOW COST HOME MAY BE BOUGHT WITHIN DECADE

Slight Increased Payments
Ten Years

WASHINGTON, D. C.—While the low-priced homes used as illustrative cases by the Federal Housing administration in a recently published booklet may be constructed in a price range of between $1,250 and $2,300, exclusive of land cost, and may be financed over periods up to 20 years, these same homes may be purchased under the insured mortgage system in a period of 10 years with very little additional strain on the average pocketbook, it was revealed today. Monthly payments for the shorter period are increased by only $5 to $8.

In a booklet entitled "Principles of Planning Small Houses," now available to the public, five examples of low-priced homes were given by the housing administration, designated as houses "A, B, C, D, and E."

Payments Compared
Statistical experts of the housing administration have tabulated the following comparisons of financing these houses under the insured mortgage system for 10-year and 20-year periods:

House A: Value of property, $1,600 (house, $1,200; land, $400). Value of loan, $1,200. Term of loan, 10 years. Initial charges, $56.93. Monthly payments, $18.82.
House A (same conditions as above): Term of loan, 20 years. Initial charges, $56.93. Monthly payments, $13.71.

From this tabulation it may be seen, according to the housing administration, that House A may be built and paid for in full within 10 years for the additional monthly outlay of only $5.11.

Other Houses
Similarly, House B: Value of property, $2,150 (house, $1,650; land, $500). Value of loan, $1,720. Term of loan, 10 years. Initial charges, $59.32. Monthly payments, $24.93.

House B (same conditions as above): Term of loan, 20 years. Initial charges, $59.32. Monthly payments, $18.07.

Thus, House B may be completely paid for in 10 years for the additional monthly outlay of only $6.86.

In a like fashion Houses C and D (value of property, $2,250; house, $1,750; land, $500) may be purchased in 10 years for an additional monthly payment of only $7.18, as compared with payments over a 20-year period.

House E (value of property, $2,700; house, $2,100; land, $600) may be purchased in its entirety within 10 years for monthly payments running only $8.62 more per month than the payments under a 20-year plan.

Charges Included
Monthly payments include amortization of principal and interest payment, average monthly service charge, housing administration insurance premium, monthly taxes and monthly hazard insurance. In the tabulation

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

THE HOUSE BUILT IN 7 HOURS AND 45 MINUTES—In Port Arthur, Tex., the "Help Thy Neighbor" spirit prevails in a most admirable form. Recently a member of the Port Arthur Building Trades council died and his widow was left without a home. The men of the town decided to provide her with one immediately. On Saturday, April 24th, nearly 100 of them got together and went to work en masse. For 7 hours and 45 minutes they scurried back and forth, busy as bees. At the end of that short time the widow walked into her new home, complete in every detail. And during their "spare time," they built a one-car garage at the rear of the house.

LOYAL TO THE FLAG—A 35-foot flagpole stands in the front yard of Edward Meighan's home in Memphis, Tenn. Every day for more than 45 years the American flag has been raised and lowered with appropriate ceremonies. Although never serving the flag as a soldier or sailor, Mr. Meighan began this observance when he became 21 years of age and has continued it, without interruption, ever since.

made by the housing administration the monthly water rent, included in the payments, was estimated at $1.

Initial charges were based on those prevailing in the District of Columbia.

STRONG FLOOR BEAMS NEEDED IN BATHROOM

The heaviest load per square foot of the entire house is usually carried by the bathroom floor, the reason for this being the weight of the materials used in the room—concrete, tile, and fixtures. Unfortunately, this is one part of the building in which the floor beams are usually weakened by careless cutting for the installation of pipes. It is possible to avoid this error by proper framing for the pipes, and this extra support should be provided to avoid settlement cracks in the tile between the tile and the built-in tub, and on the ceiling below.

Homes may be financed through the insured mortgage system of the Federal Housing administration.

GRADED LUMBER ASSURES QUALITY

Dependable lumber is essential in providing a substantial framework for a dwelling. Lumber is graded in accordance with quality, the quality being determined by the number of knots, cracks, sap pockets, and other imperfections. The fewer of these the better the grade.

Dryness is essential in lumber, as the less moisture it contains the less the amount of shrinkage after the building is thoroughly dried out.

Questions And Answers

Q.—After a heavy rain I notice a damp spot on the wall in the corner of one of my rooms. The walls are of solid brick. Can you tell me the cause and suggest a cure?

A.—Undoubtedly the brick work at that corner needs pointing up. Possibly there is a down spout at that corner which may leak, causing an excessive amount of water to run down the brick. Point the bricks carefully and replace the down spout if necessary.

Q.—What is the best way to store my cleaning materials?

A.—Assign some closet or portion of a closet to storage of all brooms, mops, and cleaning materials. Set up two or three shallow shelves, placing the lowest one four and a half feet above the floor. Have a broom strip just under the lowest shelf and have a strong cord or wire loop on each broom and mop and hang them on hooks. The shelves should be just deep enough to hold one row of cans and bottles.

Q.—The drain from my ice box gets clogged frequently. Can you tell me how to fix it?

A.—Undoubtedly the pipe is too small. It should be at least an inch and a half in diameter. It should have no sharp bends or traps in it. It should empty either directly outdoors or into a catch basin or dry well. It should not be connected with the sanitary sewer.

Q.—Is it sanitary to build an interior toilet room?

A.—Yes; if it is properly installed and ventilated. The main consideration is positive ventilation. For this purpose a good-sized vent duct must be carried to the outer air. A fan should be installed or the duct placed next to a chimney that will heat it and start the air circulating if good ventilation is desired.

VARIED ROOF TYPES FOR MODERN HOMES

The roof is a very important part of the house both in regard to architectural beauty and to maintenance expense. There are many types of roofing, ranging from wood shingle to heavy tile.

Certain types of shingles offer many years of use and require virtually no upkeep as regards painting or repairs. Some of these materials are available for exterior walls.

A house with a flat roof should be constructed so that it may be used, if desired, as a sun deck or roof terrace. The Federal Housing administration program provides for the insurance of home mortgages.

STEPS FOR HOME OWNER OFFERED BY FHA OFFICIAL

Caution In Modernization
Investments

Suggesting that the usual business precautions should be taken when making an investment as important as property repairs or improvements, L. R. Gignilliat, Jr., deputy administrator of the federal housing administration, recently outlined a number of steps that home owners and others may take to serve their interests and obtain the best values available.

"When planning any modernization job it is advisable to select carefully the dealer, contractor, or builder who will supply the material and do the work, to get two or more estimates before agreeing on prices, and to put the transaction on a strictly business basis with written specifications and conditions," said Mr. Gignilliat, who is in charge of the modernization program under Title I of the national housing act.

Eleven Points
Mr. Gignilliat suggested eleven points to be borne in mind when ordering repairs, alterations, and other property improvements. These are:
1. Specify completely, in writing, the work to be done. Outline the exact work to be accomplished, the methods to be used, and a time limit for starting and completing the job. Stipulate that all laws and regulations are to be complied with, and that the work is to be inspected and found satisfactory by the purchaser before the job will be considered completed.
2. Specify completely, in writing, the materials and equipment to be used. State all details.

3. Specify a price to include all work and materials and miscellaneous items, such as permits, etc.

4. See that the work and materials specified are furnished. Stipulate that no changes, substitutions, or extra charges will be allowed without the prior written consent of the buyer.

5. Provide that payment will be made only when the work has been satisfactorily completed or after certain stages of it have been satisfactorily completed in accordance with the price set. Require that proper protection be given to the buyer against mechanical liens. Have a definite understanding as to guaranty of satisfactory performance after payment has been made.

6. Be careful not to sign completion or installation certificate prior to the actual and satisfactory completion of the job.

7. Deal only with reputable contractors, dealers, etc. Investigate the length of time they have been in business and check with people for whom they have done work.

8. Consult the local housing bureau or local chamber of commerce if there is any question as to the integrity of the dealer or contractor.

9. If possible, call upon the dealer or contractor at his place of business, to note the general appearance of his responsibility and permanency.

10. Secure two or more bids, so as to obtain the lowest cash price consistent with quality. Generally a modernization loan is for the full amount of the job. Hence the dealer or contractor is paid in full as soon as he completes his part of the transaction. For this reason he should fix his price on a cash basis.

11. If the job warrants it, employ capable architectural or engineering services.

Does Not Intervene
Mr. Gignilliat pointed out that the regulations governing loans insured under Title I of the national housing act do not provide for intervention by the Federal Housing administration in disputes between the borrower and the dealer as to quality of workmanship and other matters of like nature, and that the borrower is not relieved of his obligation to repay the loan when such disputes occur. Proper care exercised beforehand will largely prevent dissatisfaction or misunderstandings.

FHA IS PERMANENT

The national housing act does not expire next April or next July as some seem to think. The act is permanent legislation, and the Federal Housing administration is a permanent governmental agency. The modernization credit plan expires April 1, 1937. Treasury guarantees of housing administration insurance fund debentures continues until July 1939, but insurance of home mortgages continues with fund that now totals $15,000,000. This fund is increasing at the rate of $500,000 each month.

NEW FASHIONS FOR MODERN KITCHENS

Modern kitchens are and should be totally unlike old kitchens. They should possess a new and higher type of cleanliness, compactness, airiness, sanitation, beauty and convenience.

The modern kitchen reflects more progress than any room in the house. Most of the equipment used therein has passed through a great change in size, appearance, utility, finish, convenience, and cost of operation. Efficient and adequate equipment is checked during investigation by examiners of homes to be financed with insured mortgages.

CHURCHES

Edward Farren Hayward, Rector

Services for the third Sunday after Trinity are as follows: The Holy Eucharist will be celebrated at 7:30 a.m.; church school will meet at 9:30 a.m.; morning prayer and sermon at 11 a.m. In the collect for this day, we entreat God, as the author of our good desires, to hear the prayers we offer, and to comfort and defend us accordingly. The Epistle shows the disposition of the heart and mind with which the prayers should be made. While in Holy Gospel we learn that Christ was once reproached for receiving sinners, and allowing them to eat with Him. He shows, to our unspeakable comfort, that sinners are the subjects of His redeeming love; and if we are sinners, we have a claim on His love, because He is the Saviour of sinners. The church is opened daily from 7:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. Come in, rest, pray, give thanks, meditate.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH
L. T. Hastings, Pastor
D. C. Black, Director of Music and Education

The pastor will occupy the pulpit both hours Sunday. The first part of the morning service will be devoted to praise and thanksgiving to God for His goodness in connection with the canvass of our membership for cash and pledges for the building fund. The campaign has been a success, though there are many more members to be seen. Just as the pastor began writing this announcement, Mr. R. C. Stokes, chairman of the finance committee, phoned and said final arrangements had been made and the building committee was drawing up the contract. That means that in a few days at most our ears will hear the sweet music of the saw and hammer. We take this means of thanking Mr. Stokes and his efficient committee, composed of himself as chairman, L. W. Allen, Frank Reitzel, Roy Cole and D. C. Black, together with the large group that went out and secured the pledges. We also want to thank our loyal and faithful members for the fine way in which they have cooperated to make the campaign a success. Many who are not members have also signified their interest in the building by pledging definite amounts. The building committee, composed of L. B. Pratt, chairman, E. H. Murrell and R. M. Drew, comes in for its share of thanks. This first week of the vacation Bible school has been a success from every standpoint. The parents and friends of the children are invited to attend the commencement services next Friday night. We are looking for a record attendance in Sunday school and B. T. U. Visitors and strangers always welcome.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
Grammont at Catalpa Street
Ernest Holloway, Minister

"The World's Greatest Christian's Supreme Aim Explained," and "The Motive Test" are the subjects of our meditations. They deal with the background of the Apostle Paul's controlling passion and the unseen power prompting acts. Since the Ambassador of Heaven to the Gentiles was a college man, created with an intelligence never surpassed, he must have reasons for declaring: "For me to live is Christ." What were they? Are these facts yet operative? "The Motive Test" has to do with the acceptable plan of aims, prayer and fasting. You are urged to attend the Sabbath school. If this is your church, you are obligated before God and man to support the teaching of Holy Scripture. With your interest, the attendance will be most gratifying. Today is the time. The Bible is the final source of authority in matters of religion. If this be true, how necessary that it be studied.

URANIA CCC CAMP TO BE ABANDONED

JENA, La., June 12.—(Special)—According to advices received from Washington, D. C., the Urania forest camp, located on Castor creek, near Olla, and better known as CCC camp P-58, Company 1492, will be abandoned about July 1.

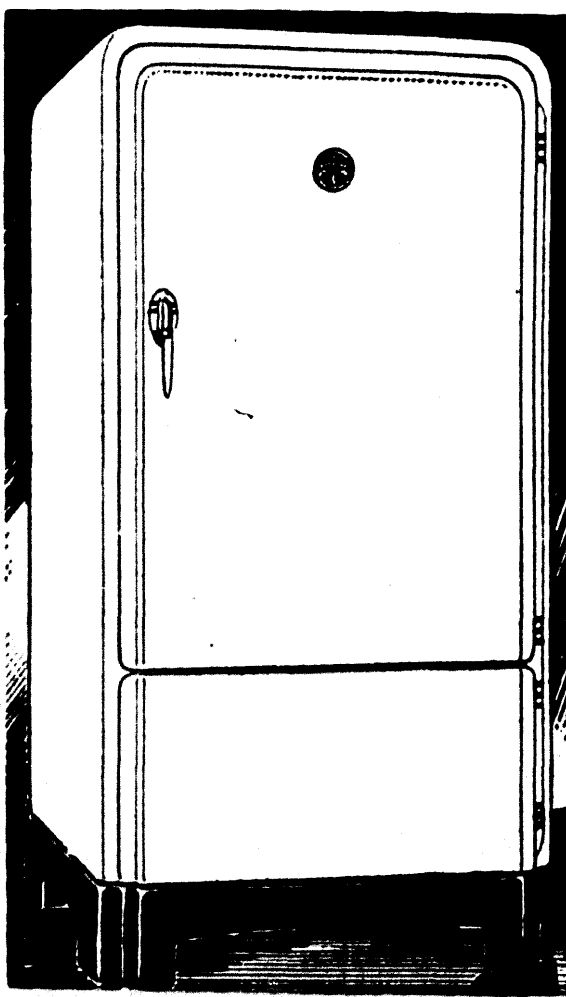

The Urania camp was among the first to be started in Louisiana and is situated almost in the center of the vast Urania reforestation project, said to be the largest pine reforestation project in the United States. The camp site of the northeast Louisiana Baptist encampment was rented in 1933 by the government for the establishment of camp P-58, and the work accomplished by this camp has attracted very favorable attention, it is said.

Federal officials are reported as stating that the work of the Urania camp has been completed. The Urania forest project, in which is located the Yale university camp site, where each year the seniors from that university spend 10 weeks of study, has been recognized by Louisiana State university, North Carolina, Alabama, and other forestry departments and has been studied by eminent forestry experts from every section of the country. It was begun over 30 years ago by the late Henry E. Hardtner, often referred to as the "daddy" of reforestation of the United States.

Out among the Mohammedan tribes, Moulay Hafid, son of the former sultan by another wife, raised an army of orthodox Moslems and in 1908 advanced against his mad half-brother in Fez. Abdelaziz, hearing of the coming attack, hurriedly got together a desultory army of vagabonds to defend the city.

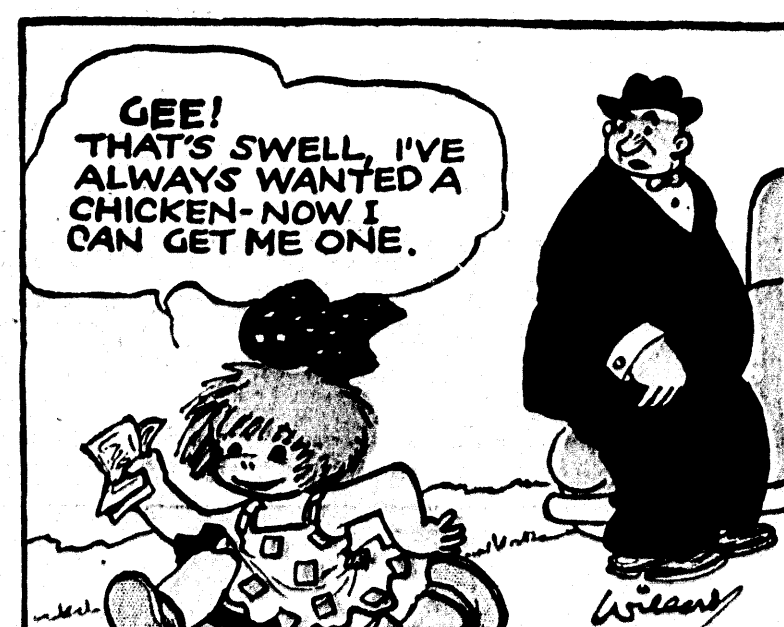

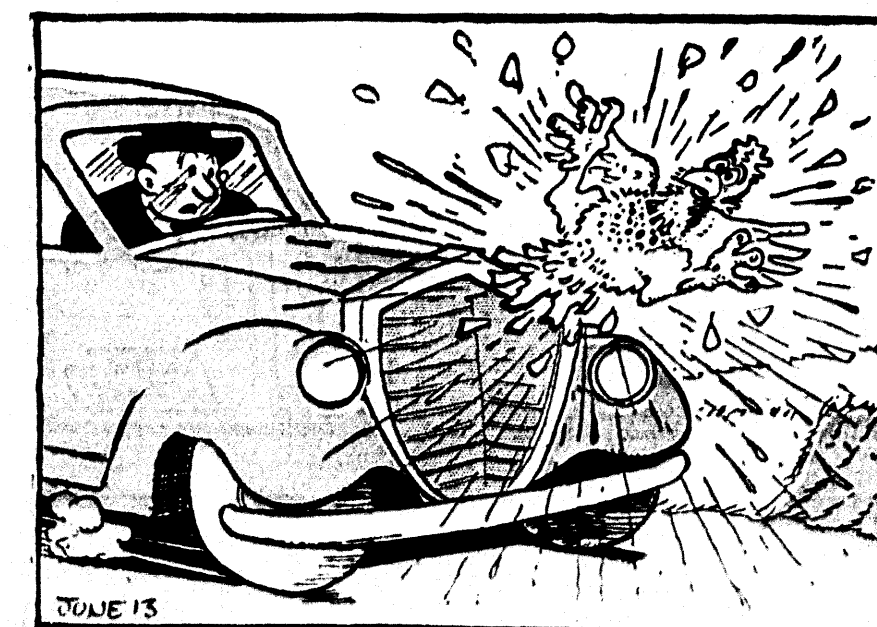

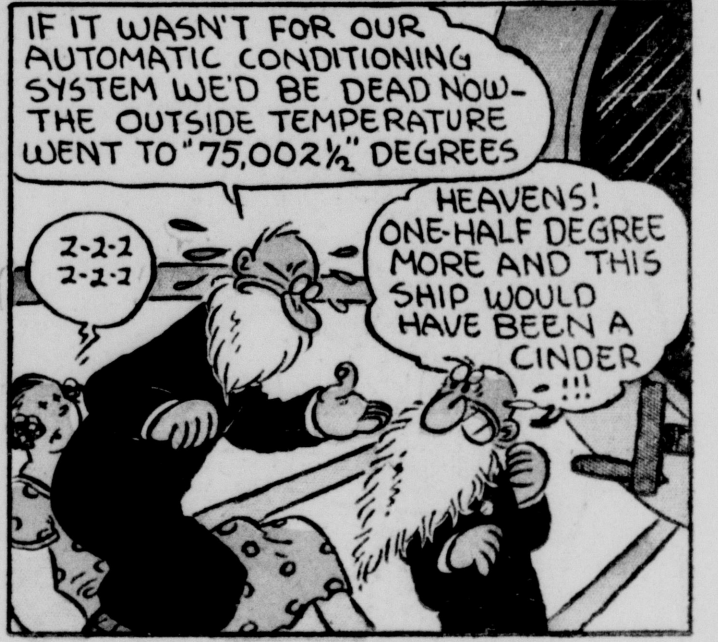

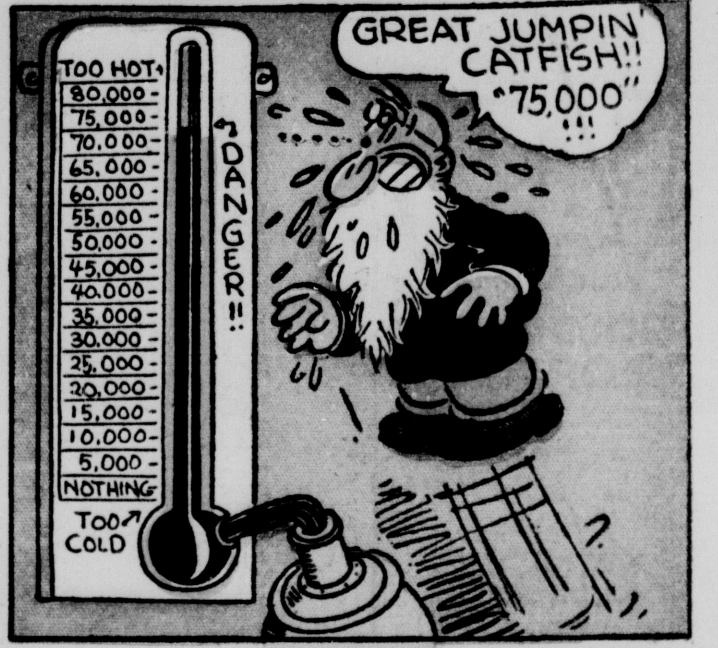

As Sultan, Hafid ruled in all the pomp and glory of the East. He built a splendid palace in Fez, and had a harem of 40 wives. In 1912 he placed his country under French protection, but he permitted his soldiers to attack a French mission, which ended in a cruel massacre in Fez. Hafid was forced to abdicate. He fled to Spain, and his brother, Moulay Youssef, took the throne. Fez, scene of these historic events, appears on several stamps issued for French Morocco. One is shown here.

FALL of SULTAN
Who Was Too
MODERN

WHEN Abdelaziz, son of the Sultan of Morocco, took the throne early in the 20th century, he brought with him ideas from the Gentile West that made his people believe him either a fiend or a mad god. For the first time they heard the strange sounds of the phonograph, saw their chief toy with a box that took pictures, and prostrated themselves before his horseless carriage.

Out among the Mohammedan tribes, Moulay Hafid, son of the former sultan by another wife, raised an army of orthodox Moslems and in 1908 advanced against his mad half-brother in Fez. Abdelaziz, hearing of the coming attack, hurriedly got together a desultory army of vagabonds to defend the city.

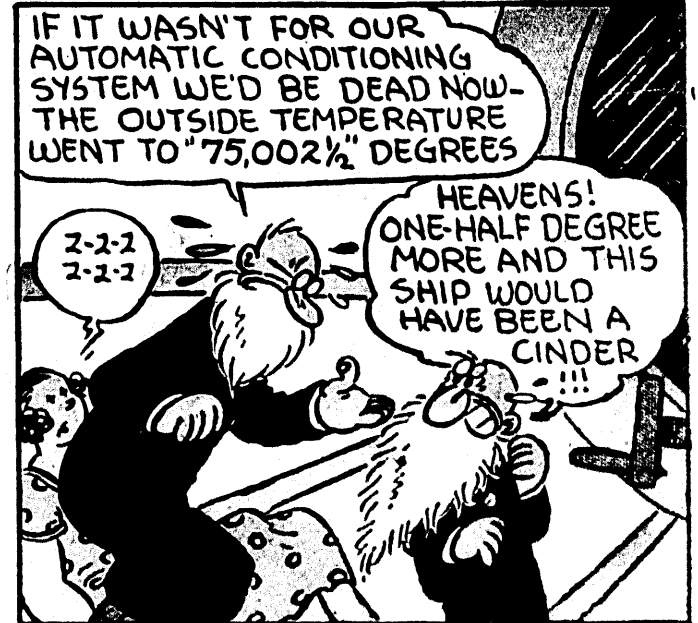

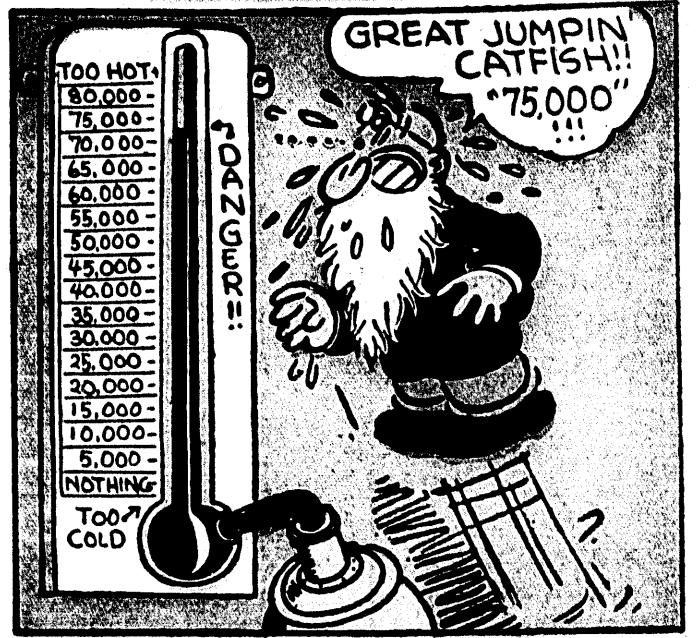

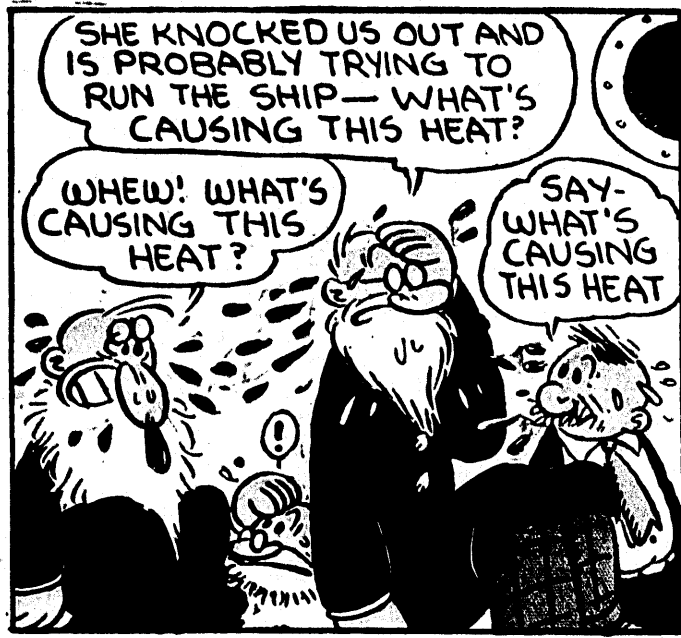

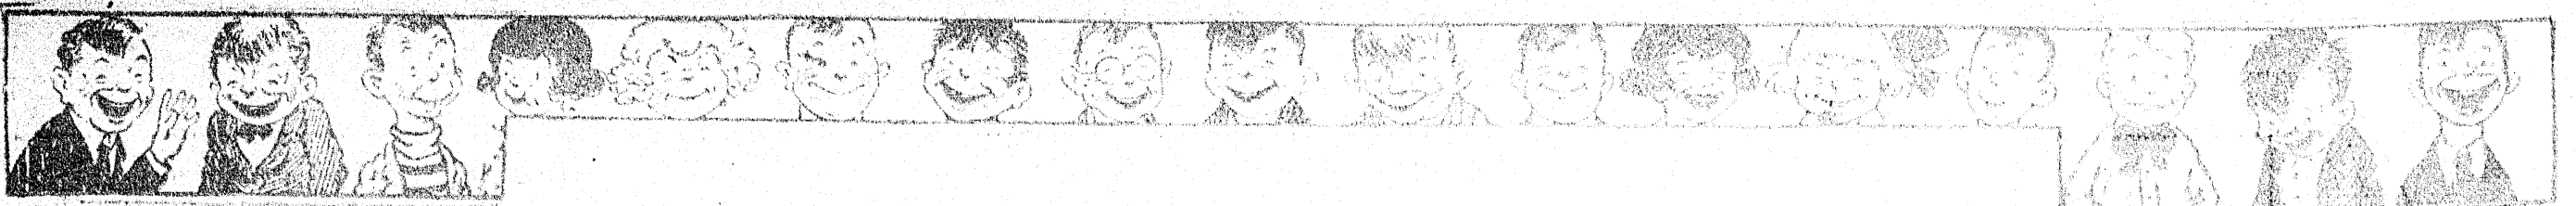

Heaping the treasures of his camp on asses, Hafid marched the animals, led by armed slaves, to the gates of Fez. There, while the untrained army of Abdelaziz fought for the rich spoils, Hafid's army walked into Fez.

As Sultan, Hafid ruled in all the pomp and glory of the East. He built a splendid palace in Fez, and had a harem of 40 wives. In 1912 he placed his country under French protection, but he permitted his soldiers to attack a French mission, which ended in a cruel massacre in Fez.
